MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED KILLED AND MANGLED IN HARRISBURG TRAIN HORROR

Twenty Passengers in Appalling Disaster on the Pennsylvania Railroad Are Known to Be Dead.

PROMINENT LOCAL VICTIMS

SPECIAL TELEGRAM FROM
CHESTER D. POTTER, Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, May 11.—Twenty are dead and two more are expected to die before morning as a result of the wreck of the Cleveland and Cincinnati express at 1:38 this morning. Train No. 19, the express wrecked, is one of the fastest and most popular night trains between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. It is always crowded and unless secured in advance it is almost impossible to get Pullman space. There were 162 passengers aboard when the train pulled out of Philadelphia at 11:05 last night.

When Lochiel, two and one-half miles south of Harrisburg, was reached, the train, 12 minutes late, was cutting the gloom at a 60-mile an hour clip. Then came chaos. An eastbound freight, flagged by a shifting engine, stopped so suddenly that it buckled in the middle, throwing two cars loaded with dynamite in front of the express.

With a terrible impact the engine of No. 19 hit the obstruction and exploded. Then the dynamiate detonated with a roar that deafened and destroyed substance within its zone. But this was not enough. Death still had its reserves in the Pintsch gas tanks underneath each Pullman, and like a bunch of giant explosives they consecutively exploded, splitting and demolishing the cars. Flames and suffocation resulted to those who had not escaped from the interior.

From a physical standpoint the wreck is one of the most peculiar of record. The collision of itself would not have resulted in great loss of life. But with the added forces of dynamite and gas tanks it is remarkable that any were left to tell how the accident happened. The hour, the scene, all contributed to the fatality. At the point of collision the track stands high above the river and there is a deep embankment on the land side. Startled from their slumbers the passengers, many of them, escaped from the cars, but returned, thinking that danger was over. Then came the other explosions and they were trapped, injured or killed.

Flames swept swiftly from wrecked engine to rear and the nine cars were quickly ablaze. When morning came they were, with the exception of steel truck and ironwork, ashes. And during this awful period men and women fought for life. Those who reached the embankment were threatened with equal danger from the successive explosions. Women and men, in bare feet, staggered in all directions seeking safety. The sharp cinders and ballast cut their feet, but they stumbled on, insensible to pain.

The train carried a number of prominent persons, and most of them escaped with only slight injuries. Among those on the train were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Tindle of Pittsburgh, the latter the daughter of Senator Knox; Mrs. A. J. Barr, wife of the proprietor of The Pittsburgh Post, and her two daughters; Victor L. Crabbe, son-in-law of Robert Pitcairn of Pittsburgh, assistant to President A. J. Cassatt of the Pennsylvania railroad, and Sam S. Shubert, one of the prominent theatrical managers of New York. Mr. Crabbe died in Harrisburg hospital at noon, a few minutes before his father-in-law reached his bedside. Mr. Shubert was reported to be badly injured, but the others were only slightly hurt.

Horror Caused by Dynamite.

The wrecked train was the second section of the Cleveland and Cincinnati express, leaving Philadelphia at 11:05 o'clock last night. It consisted of a combination baggage and smoking car, one day coach and six sleepers. There are various stories of how the wreck occurred, but the official version is as follows:

About 1:40 o'clock the engineer of an eastbound freight train was flagged by the crew of a shifting engine ahead on the same track. The engineer quickly put on his airbrakes and the train, an unusually long one, came to a sudden halt. The strain on the air valves was severe, and one of the connecting air holes in the middle of the train blew out. This caused the middle of the train to "buckle" and the damaged cars fell over on the passenger tracks.

Just as this happened the Cleveland express came thundering up and "sideswiped" the wreck. The express was stopped within its own length and the third sleeper was opposite the wrecked cars. Before anyone could leave the passenger train, which was not very badly damaged, a few slight explosions occurred, and then there was one great flash and rear that shook the earth. The whole thing occurred within a few seconds.

Heard Cries of Agony.

A scene of horror followed the blowing up of the dynamite. The passenger cars and some freight cars instantly took fire. As the reverberations of the terrific explosion died away in the hills across the Susquehanna river, the agonizing cries of the injured could be heard. Men and women came tumbling and climbing from the car windows or crawled from under the wreckage. No one for the moment seemed to know what to do, and many of the passengers, momentarily seized with terror, ran wildly about the fields on the north side of the railroad or waded into the shallow waters of the river which parallels the railroad on the south.

Realizing their safety and the danger still threatening others, the frightened passengers turned in and began the rescue of the living. As they approached the wreck another explosion occurred which sent them scurrying away. Fearing that the entire freight train might be loaded with dynamite no one dared go near the wreck. Finally the railroad men, who knew the contents of the burning freight

BROUGHT SORROW TO PITTSBURGH

Harrisburg Railroad Disaster Cost Lives of Five Men of This City.

MANY LOCAL PEOPLE HURT

SPECIAL TELEGRAM FROM
CHESTER D. POTTER, Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, May 11.—Pittsburgh contributed at least five of the 20 killed and 22 of the 100 or more injured, as a result of a Pennsylvania railroad disaster here this morning. When it is considered that an express train was running at 60 miles an hour at the time it struck a wrecked freight, that its engine blew up and that this was supplemented by the explosion of 50,000 pounds of dynamite, it is remarkable that a soul was left to tell the story.

Harrisburg tonight still thrills with the horror of the early morning. Its hospitals are crowded with injured and its physicians and nurses are wearied by their considerate and tender care of the maimed and wounded. Not only have the professional services of the city been active and faithful in their humane work, but the business and social element have volunteered a service acceptable and useful. In the wards of the city hospital tonight are the women of wealth and fashion ministering to those who are suffering.

Ex-Mayor Vance McCormick, assisted by a large number of noble women, has been at the institution since dawn. At their disposal are two long-distance telephones, furnished by the Pennsylvania railroad, and the entire local service. The operators are silk-gowned women, distressed in feature by the harrowing sights of the day, but firm and determined in their efforts to keep informed the relatives and friends of those who are being cared for by the staff and the white-gowned nurses. Hands flashing with diamonds and other precious gems are telling those in Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia and other cities, of the instant condition of their loved ones. All are on the verge of physical exhaustion, but none realize the fact, and under the quiet forceful guidance of Vance McCormick they are discharging a duty of humanitarian importance.

Nineteen bodies have been recovered, of which 10 have been identified. In Boyd's morgue lie nine charred trunks of what yesterday were living, thinking, happy travelers, men and women. Their identities will never be differentiated.

THREE ENGINES ARE WRECKED

One Had Been Hauling Relatives of Victims of P. R. R. Disaster—Man Killed, Others Hurt.

WARREN, PA., May 11.—In a crash between three locomotives on the Philadelphia & Erie division of the Pennsylvania railroad, about one mile east of Warren, Charles Souen, fireman of Erie, was killed and David Sautelle, an engineer of Erie, fatally injured. A heavy engine, eastbound, broke down and two trains collided with it. One engine had been hauling a special containing relatives of people killed or injured in the wreck at Harrisburg, and was returning.

William Ward, Henry Havlock, M. Schuman and Edward Logan, all of Warren, were burned by escaping steam, and Ward may not live.

M'BRIDE'S LUCK BOOMS BUTLER

New Oil Pool May Be Small but Is One of the Old Fashioned Fourth Sand Richness.

HON. T. W. PHILLIPS' ESTIMATE

SPECIAL TELEGRAM FROM
A. E. CRUM, Staff Correspondent.

BUTLER, May 11.—While the McBride well has settled down some from its frothy start it is a fine fourth sand well. Estimates on the first day, when most oil went down the little stream toward the Connoquenessing, range from 4000 barrels downward. Estimates today varied from 60 barrels an hour down to 25 barrels an hour. Here the officials on the ground said they were taking all of the oil, but declined to say just how much the gauge pole showed. My own estimate of the stream in the middle of the afternoon was at the rate of 30 to 35 barrels an hour.

It will require a week to estimate its staying quality, which in turn will indicate the probable size of the pool. This cannot be more than two miles, because it is only that distance between light wells on either end of the fourth sand trend. Northeast and southwest it is narrowing in more closely. The well will likely improve in this way: Streak when the holes are started and it is quite probable a second pay will be found near the bottom of the sand. The sand grows thinner from south to north. A fair average from known data will give the McBride mill from 22 to 24 feet of the rock.

May Be Two Pay Streaks.

Wells that have been drilled in the Speechley and north of the Waldron farm have found no more than 26 feet of fourth sand. Wells to the south of the Connoquenessing creek have found 30 feet of fourth sand. At Thorn creek, to the southwest, the fourth sand ran some thicker than that and contained three and four productive streaks. In 22 feet of sand there should be two, but the drillers can tell.

McBride, McCool & Co. have 700 acres under lease, surrounding their well and may have the best of the pool. T. W. Phillips & Co. have a lease adjoining on the north, and more than 15 rods from the gusher, and are building a rig about the same distance back from their line. They should get in oil as good as any one can. The Phillips company secured its lease when the McBride well got started the previous week, so it got in on the ground floor. The Associated Producers closed a lease on 40 acres of the Barrickman property, north of the Phillips lease, today, paying $11,000 bonus. The friends considered pretty steep.

E. H. Jenkins & Bro. are starting a rig on the lease they secured yesterday morning, for which they paid $5,000. Pretty nearly everything else is tied up within the possible limits of the pool, though there are plenty of anxious producers looking for an opening. Lands further away will command smaller prices, however, for Butler fourth sand pockets are sometimes very small. Hon. Thomas W. Phillips of New Castle has secured more of them than all other producers combined and knows more about the fourth sand than any other man.

Hon. T. W. Phillips' Opinion.

Mr. Phillips was here today and when seen in the Home Natural Gas Company's office he said: "The McBride well is in the fourth sand. There is no doubt about that. It is producing the usual oil of the fourth sand and the rock was found at the right level—about 30 feet below where the third sand should be. It is a good well. One of my men just told me it has made a little more than two feet in the tank in the last few hours. I think it will improve when drilled again and I believe it may get another pay when put farther into the sand. It is too soon to speculate on the size of the pool. There may be a mile of rich territory. There cannot be more than two miles good for there are small wells at either end. It may taper out to these."

Mr. Phillips has drilled hundreds of wells in Butler county, producing oil from the hundred-foot third sand and fourth sand. He has one of the finest blocks of gas territory in the world, producing from the Speechley sand, one well exceeding 30,000,000 cubic feet initial flow in 24 hours and having a rock pressure of 954 feet to the square inch. Since the development of the Thorn Creek pool, 21 years ago, which began with Phillips' No. 1 on the Bartley farm, Mr. Phillips has drilled a line of wells across the county from Thorn Creek to Great Belt, securing two-fourth sand wells that did as much as 120 barrels an hour at the start. Each was surrounded by a small pocket of rich territory. Others of less productiveness at the start opened small pools. They attracted attention for the moment and added something to the grand aggregate of production. Some of them are good producers yet.

Rejoicing With McBride.

McBride's luck may open a larger productive area than any of the many successful wells of Mr. Phillips east of Thorn creek—it may not. It is sufficient for Mr. McBride that he has a fine well after patient seeking—one that will make him comfortable for life, if he quits wildcatting. It is probably even more gratifying to him to know that all Butler is rejoicing with him in his good fortune. Every man, woman and child that speaks of the gusher says, "I am glad McBride got it, for he deserved it." William Lydecker voiced the universal sentiment when he said: "With one possible exception, I could not have been happier had any other man brought in that well. That exception is myself. 'Spotty' is all right."

Peter V. McCool of the Standard Steel Car Company, who shares the good fortune, says he is happier on McBride's account than on his own. "McBride deserved this luck," said Mr. McCool. "He was up against it for a long time, but he never weakened. He worked for me down in the car works. If you want to know anything about the well ask him. He located it. He drilled it. This is my first venture in oil. I know more about steel cars." Then Mr. McBride added: "I'll tell you anything I can for the sake of old Bradford days. But, say, somebody did me up fine in the Pittsburgh papers. Said I had an offer of $50,000 for my interest, $25,000 in sight. I'd like to see the color of the hair of the chap that made the offer. Would I take it? Try me."

There is no denying that Butler is excited. It has not shown as much interest in the oil producing business since I scouted around the Thorn creek district 21 years ago. The road from the town to the well was lined with vehicles all day and I was told there were more out yesterday. There is a crowd of sightseers about the well all of the time and many of the curious got a thorough wetting by the showers this afternoon. Everything was dampened except their enthusiasm.

More Wildcatting Will Follow.

McBride's discovery will encourage more wildcatting. There may be other pockets and pools all the way up the belt to Karns City, at least, possibly up to Bruin. Mr. Phillips' experience along the south line is likely to add faith in what may be found northward. In fact, Mr. Phillips had one nice pool, 21 years ago, north of St. Joe. I saw the first well drilled in, not a large one, but as nice an oil sand as anyone could wish to see. The drilling that is being done in search of the Speechley sand may happen to hit a pocket or two in the fourth.

Butler county has been tremendously rich in oil. Since the venturesome wildcatter started back from Parkers Landing, in 1870, there have been a succession of developments that have kept the old county in mind. In 1873 it was the fourth sand cross belt at Karns City; in 1875 the fourth sand at Modoc and Greece City; in 1879 it was the pool at Byrom Center, way up to the Venango county line, and in 1882 Andrew Bilhemantz's surprise at Baldridge. Thorn Creek in 1884; Reibold nearly three years later. Five horizons have been found productive at various places, and there is a possibility of at least one other, since gas has been found in the sixth, across the Allegheny river in Armstrong county.

Mr. McBride calls his well the Marie, naming it for his daughter. It it a grand well. Yet it will not be a market crusher. It is not probable the market will be reduced a single cent on account of it. Had it arrived during the palmy days of the Parker Oil exchange, when S. D. Karns and Capt. Peter Grace were furnishing thrills for the trade, during the time of the Modoc war, it would have been good for a 10-cent drop at least. Not so now. The Standard Oil and the Pure Oil are the only buyers, and they will not scare a little bit. Butler and Butler county will profit nevertheless.

The Associated Producers today leased the remaining 40 acres of the Barrickman farm, near the McBride well, for $11,000. The Phillips Gas and Oil Company today secured a 20-acre lease from Painter & Boon, owners of the 800 feet south of the gusher, for $1,750. William Walker of the Butler County National bank, secured a lease of the Manny farm of 5 acres and bought an interest in the Douthett & Graham lease on the Lemmon farm. The Ihnsen heirs' farm is the only unleased piece of land in the neighborhood. It contains 56 acres. Dominic Ihmsen of Pittsburgh was in Butler today. Butler parties are negotiating and will probably get this lease at a figure well up in the thousands. The McBride & McCook Company besides the 40 acres on the Waldron farm, have 20 acres of the Lemmon farm, 20 of the John Harding farm and all of the Duff, farm. Their next well will be on the Harding farm, to the southwest. Michael Finnegan of Pittsburgh, who has three-eighths of the company's interests, is said to have helped to drill 28 dry holes during the last year.

ABOUT 25 ARRIVE IN PITTSBURGH

Wreck Victims Least Seriously Hurt Are Given Attention by the Railroad.

MANY HAD ALREADY SETTLED

About 25 passengers of the ill-fated train reached Pittsburgh last evening. These were mainly those who had been most fortunate, not having sustained hurts sufficiently severe to prevent their traveling to their journey's end.

The officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company were under orders to give to every one of them all possible attention. Each was met as he left the train by one of a corps of physicians, who were there for the purpose. If a new bandage was needed, it was put on; if the burns were paining those who had been caught by the explosion, cooling lotions were applied; if a cut needed dressing, skilled hands manipulated the gauze and antiseptics.

Among those who came there was not a small proportion, who under the excitement of the wreck, had failed to pay attention to meal time, and by the time of their arrival here the pangs of hunger were becoming very evident. The best that the Union station restaurant had was at their command, and the sideboard there was brought into play as well.

There were claim agents at the station, but for them there was little use, for the majority of the passengers had already either settled their claims at Harrisburg, or had signified their intention to have the matter handled for them by an attorney, so that the care given at Pittsburgh was not entirely dictated by selfish or designing reasons. An official of the company said:

"We are doing all we can to help these people, simply because it's only decent to do so."

For those passengers whose destination was beyond Pittsburgh special care was taken. They were furnished with tickets to take the place of those destroyed in the wreck. Sections in sleeping cars were provided for them, and in the case of the Clevelanders a special Pullman car was given.

Physicians Went With Them.

With each train, westbound or northbound, containing victims, went a physician of the company, who was ready to give attention to any need, medicinal or surgical, that might develop. Arrangements were made by telegraph for carriages to meet each at his destination.

The passengers who reached Pittsburgh were plainly not wearing the clothes their tailors had made. There was a remarkable assortment of Harrisburg hats. One dignified Cleveland gentleman, upon whose brow a silk hat would sit well, was wearing an automobile cap. Another rich man's trousers were of the "high-water" type, while another one had to take several reefs in his trousers legs to prevent his walking on his own clothes. These two gentlemen had a rare opportunity to make a fair exchange which would be no robbery.

Among the ladies of the party there were evidences also that Harrisburg, not New York, London nor Paris, had set the fashions of their spring costumes. There was little attention paid to such matters at this time, however, for those who reached Pittsburgh were too grateful at having escaped death to notice the lesser difficulties.

The following list is the one obtained by the railroad officials at the Union station. It is supposed to represent every person who was able to travel and continued his trip yesterday. Some were eastern business men who had engagements here and did not find their hurts serious enough to make them return to their homes. Others were bound for points in the west. When convenient train schedules could not be found for such travelers, they were sent to Pittsburgh hotels and will continue their trip today:

Slightly Injured Brought Home.

The list of arrivals is as follows:

W. J. LYDICK, East Liberty.
GEORGE W. MILLER, 402 Rebecca street, East End.

MRS. H. W. M'ATEER, Wilkinsburg.

Jumped on to the Platform.

For awhile after the 6:55 and 7:15 p. m. trains on the Pennsylvania railroad came in yesterday, 35 minutes late, the platform in front of the trainmaster's office looked like a hospital. Men and women in wheel chairs, men limping, men with their heads tied up or their hands bandaged, some with a sticking plaster over the ear and others with big strips on their faces were led into the trainmaster's office. There was not much time to talk to them, for as soon as they stepped off the train they were taken in tow by uniformed railroad employes.

Drs. Herron and Hodkinson, the company's surgeons, were in the office. Under the supposition that some of the dressings might have been crudely made, the wounds were examined again and fresh dressings were put on. Then the injured were led to the restaurant and fed.

The telephone booth in the Union station did a land office business. All who desired could telephone to their homes by long distance telephone at the expense of the railroad company, and many took advantage of the opportunity, while others paid their own way at the booth. The names of all the injured were taken down in the trainmaster's office and notes were made of the extent of their wounds. Railroad clerks with pencil and paper were flying about the station and not an injured passenger got away without the railroad company knowing who he was, where he lived and how badly he was hurt.

Received at East Liberty.

Scores of relatives and friends of victims and passengers in the wreck awaited their arrival and news of their condition, in the East Liberty station of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company last evening, following the announcement that many of the survivors would arrive on train No. 25, due at 6:40 p. m.

Contrary to expectations, a number of the survivors arrived on train No. 15 at 7:20 o'clock, and among these was John B. Reynolds, theatrical manager for Blanche Walsh, who alighted at the East Liberty station. He was greeted by his wife, his mother, and his brother, Finley Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds was limping and stated he had been bruised about the right leg and upon the back. Describing the wreck Mr. Reynolds said:

"I heard a frightful crash as I was hurled into the aisle. I was momentarily stunned and was aroused to hear a woman cry for help and implore me to assist her. I helped her out of a window while another passenger handed her her child. I had barely jumped through the window myself when there was a thunderous explosion. I was hurled to the ground and stunned. When I recovered I crawled across the tracks and underneath a standing freight train and rolled down the embankment. I was in my night clothes. I never want to witness such a catastrophe again. Tracks were strewn with half-naked men and women, and their frantic cries were heart-rending."

Four Survivors Arrive.

The first section of train No. 25 arrived in East Liberty station about 15 minutes later and carried four more survivors, of whom W. J. Reidock of Shady avenue, got off at East Liberty. He was bruised about the body and wore an old straw hat and a suit of clothes given him in Harrisburg, having lost all his wearing apparel in the wreck.

Section two of train No. 25 arrived a few minutes later, bearing a score of passengers from the wrecked train. Among those who alighted in East Liberty was George W. Miller of 402 Rebecca street, president of the William Miller & Sons Company. Mr. Miller bore a deep cut on his left cheek and was bruised about the body and limbs. His head was also slightly cut. He was removed to the Harrisburg hospital after the wreck, and stated last night that there were scores still in the hospital in serious condition.

"Following the crash I was hurled out of my berth into the aisle," said Mr. Miller, "and together with several other passengers I managed to crawl through a window. Immediately after reaching the outside a deafening explosion rent the air, followed shortly after by a series of lesser explosions. I was struck by dying glass and timber. The scenes were too horrible for description."

Among other wreck passengers who got off at East Liberty was Miss Brown, daughter of Congressman James W. Brown.

Czar's Soldiers Attack Japanese Garrison and Are Repulsed With 300 Casualties.

TOKYO, May 12.—The following telegram from a army headquarters in Manchuria was officially given out today:

"On the morning of May 9, the enemy made an attack on our garrison at Yingecheng, which assumed the offensive, attacked and dispersed them. The enemy's losses are estimated at 300. Our casualties were one killed and 50 wounded."

Little Objects to a Wink.

The lie was passed at a meeting of Swissvale council last night, and for a time it looked as if there would be an interchange of uppercuts. The trouble arose over a surreptitious wink which Councilman E. A. Stroud is said to have passed along to a fellow-member. David Little, who was addressing the council, concluded he was included in the wink, and a swift exchange of personalities followed. Spectators interfered and the trouble was quelled.

train, led the way and the uninjured passengers followed.

Unequal Struggle Against Death.

The work of rescue was at first slow, and it seemed as though the flames would envelope the entire express train before those who were pinned beneath the heavy wreckage could be freed. Everywhere there came shrieks for help, and the frantic rescuers worked with willing hands. Scores of those who were trapped in their sleeping berths or pinioned under wreckage were taken out and laid in the field badly hurt.

The men fought hard to reach other victims and many were taken from the mass of broken wood and twisted iron just as the flames touched their naked forms, burning some of them quite severely. The advancing fire drove the rescuers back as they were about to take others from the wreck and the unfortunate men and women were soon enveloped in the flames. The cries of the dying were heart-rending in the extreme, but nothing could be done for them. Many of those willing to help but unable to do so had to turn away from the horrible scene.

An alarm of fire was sent in, but when the firemen reached the scene the flames had done their work so far as the victims in the wreck were concerned. The entire train was consumed by fire.

After the victims in the wreck were beyond human aid more attention was paid to the injured, who presented a pitiable sight as they lay in the field or on the banks of the river. With the firemen came a corps of physicians from the city and the work of attending the injured began in earnest. As quickly as temporarily relieved of pain from burns or other injuries they were placed on special trains and trolley cars and rushed to the hospital here.

The police of the sparsely settled neighborhood came to the relief of the injured and those who escaped in their night clothes. Blankets and bedding and clothes from the homes of the foreign-speaking people who are in the large majority in this section were brought to the scene by the wagon load, and nearly every one was provided for.

Several hundred railroad laborers were on the spot within an hour and at daybreak their number had been increased to a thousand. It was a gruesome task for the railroad men. Not one whole body was found in the wreck. Either an arm or a leg or all four limbs were burned off the trunk, and in several cases only portions of trunks were found.

Ten Charred Bodies Recovered.

Ten charred bodies were found under one Pullman car. It is the belief of the railroad officials that if the explosion had not occurred there probably would have been no loss of life.

The dead were taken to Boyd's undertaking rooms, near the hospital, which were transformed into a temporary morgue. The street in front of the building was crowded with curious men and women, anxious to view the wreck victims. Coroner George C. Krouse empanelled a jury, which viewed the bodies this afternoon. He will begin taking testimony tomorrow at the court house.

The physicians and nurses at the Harrisburg hospital, assisted by the trustees and members of the board of women managers, have been working incessantly since the first of the injured were taken there at 2:30 o'clock this morning. The hospital is crowded to the doors and row after row of cots now occupy the wards. Chairs were utilized as beds for the children who were injured and the benches of the chapel were used to make comfortable the less seriously injured. The sidewalks around the building had been crowded since early morning with persons anxiously waiting to see the injured. The crush for admittance was so great that it was necessary to place a policeman at each entrance.

After the remains had all been gathered and sent to the morgue the work of clearing the tracks was begun, and at 9 o'clock two of the four tracks were open for traffic. The other two had been wiped out by the explosion and it will be several days or a week before they can be relaid.

The scene of the wreck was visited by probably more than 50,000 persons. There were at least 5,000 persons constantly at the place. They came from Lancaster and from all the small towns within 50 miles. The authorities had matters well in hand, however, and kept the crowd back from the tracks by means of ropes stretched along the telegraph poles.

W. B. McCaleb, superintendent of the Philadelphia division, whose offices are in this city, said he was unable as yet to fix any responsibility for the accident. A thorough investigation, he said, is now being made by his men.

SORROW TO PITTSBURGH

Together they passed out of life and in death they are composite.

Mr. Donnelly Painfully Hurt.

None of the injured from Pittsburgh is expected to die. Charles Donnelly is probably the most painfully injured, but his son, Charles Donnelly, Jr., who brought with him Dr. Litchfield, the family physician, will take his father from the hospital tomorrow, if not home, to a hotel. Mr. Donnelly is severely cut about the head; badly bruised limbs are other injuries, but Dr. Harvey Smith says there are no internal injuries.

The family of A. J. Barr, publisher of the Pittsburgh Post, had a happy deliverance from death. Mrs. Barr and her two daughters, Constance and Madelein, left New York at 8:25 o'clock last night. Mr. Barr remained at the Waldorf. When the express hit the freight Mrs. Barr was awakened by the concussion and illumination caused by the exploding engine. Telling her daughters to follow, she led the way to the river embankment. As they reached the riverside, the dynamite let go and they were hurled to the earth. Aside from the shock and the lacerations caused by flying cinders they were not seriously hurt. Mr. Barr reached here this afternoon and tonight informed the writer that he would take his wife and daughters to Pittsburgh tomorrow.

Pittsburghers Died Like Heroes.

Dr. Harvey Smith of the hospital staff was eloquent tonight in his tributes to the heroism and nerve displayed by the Pittsburgh men who died. He said he never saw men face death more bravely than did Messrs. Crabbe, Phillips, Bright and Zeiger.

"I will make a good, brave fight," said Mr. Crabbe to Dr. Smith when he reached the hospital. The poor fellow was burned from scalp to foot, not an inch of his body having escaped the flames. Though suffering the torture which only fire can produce he assisted the doctors while they swathed his body in bandages, standing erect and directing them in their work. But his courage was without avail, death coming at noon, an hour before his wife could reach here. He was conscious until a half hour before the end.

James R. Phillips was another Pittsburgh hero. He, too, assisted the nurses and the doctors, telling them that he could bear the pain and that he was going to get well. Like Crabbe, he was burned all over and death came at 1 o'clock. Bright and Zeiger also held out gamely to the end, the former dying at 1 o'clock this afternoon, shortly before his wife and son reached Harrisburg. Zeiger died at 11 o'clock this morning.

At midnight the hospital authorities reported that two more were expected to die, Max Slotthelmer and Joseph Eberly of New York city. The death of Engineer Alfred Crosby swelled the death list to 20 and these will swell the total to 22. There are 52 cases now being cared for at the hospital and as many more having superficial injuries were discharged during the day.

Gov. Pennypacker got out of bed at 3 o'clock this morning to look after Mr. and Mrs. Tindle of Pittsburgh, who were on their way home from Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Tindle escaped from the wreck in their night clothes and walked to Steelton, where they telephoned to the governor of their misfortune. Private Secretary Wharton started on horse back to Steelton, and on the way he met a cab which was pressed into service and Mr. and Mrs. Tindle brought to the executive mansion before daybreak. Mrs. Tindle's feet were cut and bruised from walking on the railroad tracks. The governor procured clothing for her and her husband and they were soon made comfortable.

Mr. Pitcairn arrived here in a special train with his daughter, Mrs. Crabbe, and other members of his family shortly after the death of Mr. Crabbe. The body was sent to Pittsburgh on the special tonight.

H. P. Bope, vice president of the Carnegie Steel Company, who was injured in the wreck, left the hospital this afternoon, and is now at the residence of James B. Bailey, general manager of the Central Iron and Steel Company. Mr. Bope's injuries consist of a number of cuts and abrasions over his body and are not serious.

Freed by the Explosion.

Arthur G. Cope of Pittsburgh was in the smoking compartment of one of the Pullmans when the shock came and he was caught between two seats and held fast until the explosion occurred. Instead of injuring him this set him free. It tore a hole in the floor and volumes of flame leaped out. He crawled toward the door, but it was jammed, and then he groped through the smoke and flames to the windows. One of these was open and with two or three others he managed to clamber out. In his ear, he added, there was no crying out. The occupants were either killed outright as they slept or were flung through the windows.

The experience of Paul Dinkle of Pittsburgh was one of those curious mixtures of the grotesque and the tragic.

"I had just given my shoes to the porter for cleaning," he said, "when the smash came and I was jammed into the forward end of the car. Instinctively I grebbed for my purse and got it and held onto it all the time, although I wasn't aware of the fact until a long time afterwards. I remember that several seconds seemed to elapse between the first crash, which I supposed was the collision, and the heavy explosion. The floor was driven up into the car. Trying to get out of the car I was impeded everywhere by the loose curtains of the berths, which were ablaze. I don't know now I reached the ground. I only know that I did not go out by a door or a window, but just found myself out on the tracks."

Following is a list of those from Pittsburgh and vicinity who were in the wreck, but whose injuries are not reported by the railroad people, nearly all of these either sustained only slight injuries and were able to resume their journey or were uninjured.

THIS CITY MEETS VERY GREAT LOSS

Pittsburgh Is Made to Grieve Over Many Prominent Citizens Dead and Hurt.

ACTIVE LIVES OF THE VICTIMS

Upon the city of Pittsburgh fell the full force of the calamity on the Pennsylvania railroad, and scores of Pittsburgh homes suffered. Not only were families left fatherless in some instances and in others made to mourn for the injury of dear ones, but outside the immediate families an unusually large number of persons felt the affliction, for the victims of the wreck were exceptionally well known.

Possibly never before has there been a railroad wreck in which better-known Pittsburghers suffered. Wherever one went yesterday the question was always, "Is there any late news from the wreck?" Everyone knew personally or by reputation some of those who had been through the baptism of flame.

Up to a late hour last evening the following Pittsburghers were known to be dead:

VICTOR L. CRABBE, son-in-law of Robert Pitcairn, and purchasing agent of the Carbon Steel Company.

JAMES R. PHILLIPS, former district manager in Pittsburgh of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company.

PAUL BRIGHT, a well-known civil engineer.

Four Carbon Steel Men Victims.

Mr. Crabbe was one of a party of officials of the Carbon Steel Company who had been in New York in connection with the litigation over some steel supplied the John A. Roebling's Sons' Company for the new Williamsburg bridge at New York. Paul Bright, another victim, had inspected the steel made in this district for the bridge, on behalf of Stowell & Cunningham, bridge engineers of Albany, N. Y.; J. W. Anderson, one of those hurt, is vice president of the Carbon Steel Company. Mr. Anderson's son, Frank, also with the Carbon company, is among those hurt.

Victor L. Crabbe was a native of Wooster, O., and a graduate of the University of Wooster. Shortly after his graduation he came to Pittsburgh, and was connected for a time with Shadyside academy, of which his brother, Prof. William R. Crabbe, is president. About 15 years ago he entered the service of the Carbon Steel Company, and has for a long time been the purchasing agent.

About eight years ago he was married to Miss Susie Pitcairn, a daughter of Robert Pitcairn, resident assistant to the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Their residence was at the Pitcairn home, 5400 Ellsworth avenue. His widow and two children, Elizabeth Pitcairn and Susie Lee, survive.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in reaching Robert Pitcairn and Mrs. Pitcairn. Both had gone east the night before, Mr. Pitcairn to Washington to attend the International Railway congress and Mrs. Pitcairn to New York. Efforts were made to reach Mr. Pitcairn at Baltimore and again at Washington. He hurried back to Harrisburg when the news finally reached him. Mrs. Pitcairn returned at once from New York.

A Leading Tin Plate Manufacturer.

Mr. Phillips was a native of England. He came to this country about 15 years ago and had been connected since that time with the American tin plate industry in important capacities. With the formation of the United States Steel Corporation he was made a district manager of the American Tin Plate Company, and when the American Steel and American Tin Plate companies were combined, about a year ago, he continued as district manager at Pittsburgh. He retired on April 1 to take up an independent tin plate project. With a number of friends he recently bought the eight-mill plant of the Jackson Sheet and Tin Plate Company at Clarksburg, W. Va., and had planned to put it into operation this week. His trip to New York was in connection with this project.

Mrs. Phillips received word at the home in Murrayhill avenue about 3 o'clock yesterday morning of her husband's condition, and left on the first train for Harrisburg. She was accompanied by H. M. Davis and Mrs. Davis.

Paul Bright was well known among steel manufacturers of this city by reason of his service in that line. For several years he had been the Pittsburgh representative of Stowell & Cunningham, and in connection with the construction of the new East river bridge at New York had done much steel inspection in local mills.

Born in the Sewickley Valley.

He was born in Glenfield, in the Sewickley valley, and had spent his entire life here. He was graduated in 1890 from the Pittsburgh High school and in 1893 from the Western university. He was married several years ago to Miss Stella Schendel and resided in South Negley avenue. His widow and two children, Frederick Edmund and John Graham, survive. He was 38 years old.

George Zeiger, aged 22, was treasurer of the Incandescent Supply Company, Sixth avenue. A telegram from him to his brother, Charles, president of the company, early in the day, stated that he was seriously hurt. He died later.

It was announced yesterday that the Harkaway club had recalled its invitation to the hunt planned for tomorrow, owing to the death of Mr. Phillips, who was a member of the board of governors.

ARCHIBALD'S EXPERIENCE.

Cincinnati Man Is Tossed Out of His Berth and Burns Hand While Saving Suit Case.

Frank Archibald of 444 Race street, Cincinnati, was a passenger on the wrecked train. Mr. Archibald was seen yesterday at the Union station, waiting for a Cincinnati train. His right hand was tied, and outside of the bandage there was nothing to show the harrowing experience he had gone through.

"I was in the last sleeper of the train," said Mr Archibald, "and suddenly I felt a terrible wrench and then a shock. I must have been stunned by the shock for a moment, for I was suddenly awakened by an explosion and I found I was lying on the floor in the aisle of the car. Women in the car began to scream, and presently shouts and screams on the outside arose. I scrambled to my feet and found that I was only bruised, and then realized that there was an accident and I had been tossed out of my berth. In some way I got my trousers on and slipped into my shoes, minus stockings. Then I grabbed my suit case, in which I had a little more than $100 in cash, and followed the example of everybody else and made for a window, first learning that nobody in the car was injured badly enough to need assistance.

"The window I got to was broken and I first knocked off the jagged ends of glass still in the frame and climbed out. My legs felt hot and as I descended and when I got on the ground I saw that the floor of the car was burning underneath. By some foolish inspiration I got out before my suit case was out and then I found I could not get it out, as it was wider than the window. I tried to twist it to draw it out lengthwise, but my hand got caught and then the side of the car seemed to collapse, carrying the suit case down with it and releasing my hand, but not before it had been painfully burned. The suit case was no doubt burned up.

"The whole wrecked train seemed to be in a blaze, and to add to the terror there were occasional explosions, which I did not then understand, but which I have since learned, were caused by boxes of dynamite going off as the fire progressed. I tried to do what I could, and hearing a woman moaning a little way from the track, I approached her, but she cried out that she was naked and asked for something to cover her. Somebody got a blanket and carried it over to her. She was a Jewish woman from New York. Her night clothes were torn off her by projecting splinters, when she climbed out of a window of her car.

"The injured passengers, citizens of Harrisburg, who had come to the scene, policemen and firemen made dashes for the wreckage, but were forced back by the terrific heat and the exploding dynamite. Up near the front of the wreck I saw two men tugging at something sticking through a window, and then I saw they were pulling at the legs of a man, the upper part of whose body was pinned down inside the car, while his legs protruded. While the men were trying to rescue him the fire reached them and they had to leave him to his fate.

"It was an awful scene, the screams of those doomed to death by fire, the moans of the wounded lying alongside the track, the flames and the incessant explosions made up a travesty of horrors that I shall never forget.

"The people of Harrisburg rose nobly to the occasion. The wounded were attended to, and everything possible was done to those caught in the wreck. Trolley cars were soon on the scene and the more slightly wounded, myself among the number, were hustled aboard and taken to the hospital. My hand was dressed there.

"I judge from remarks by others in my car, who were not stunned, that the explosion that seemed to awaken me, after I was stunned by being thrown into the aisle, was the second explosion, for one man who was awake when the accident happened said that the sound I heard was preceded by an explosion much more terrific."

PULLMAN LOSS, $75,000.

Local Manager Says Six Cars Are Destroyed, Worth from $10,000 to $18,000 Each.

George H. Edwards, Pittsburgh manager of the Pullman Car company, stated last night that $75,000 worth of Pullman sleepers were destroyed in the Harrisburg wreck.

"There were six cars demolished," said Mr. Edwards, "and their cost ranges from $10,000 to $18,000 each, according to their construction. It has been an exceptionally unfortunate season for the Pennsylvania lines. Five of our cars were lost in the Clifton wreck, which makes a total of 11 cars, valued approximately at $150,000. According to our contracts with the railroad company, they are responsible for our rolling stock, except when damaged by conditions not controllable by them, which are termed 'acts of God.' I must say, however, that I know of no other railroad system that makes such careful provision for the safety of its passengers as does the Pennsylvania Railroad Company."

LAY TEMPORARY TRACKS TO PREVENT BLOCKADE

New Device Utilized on Account of Harrisburg Wreck Opens Up the Line.

The new arrangement for building temporary tracks was tested yesterday by reason of the Harrisburg wreck. The device consists of a cross-over switch, somewhat similar to those used on electric lines, but in addition is so arranged that sectional rails can be placed down at any distance required, and connect with a similar cross-over switch.

As soon as the wreck was reported to the proper officials the new device was ordered installed. This was done and within two hours after the apparatus was at the place of the wreck a detour line was erected, over which trains passed. This arrangement prevented a blockade of the line, as trains both east and west used the temporary tracks, thus going around the wreck.

It was 6 o'clock yesterday morning when the first train passed the scene of the wreck. The eastern trains were permitted to pass before the westbound. The sections following the wrecked train reached the city about noon. Train No. 3, due in Pittsburgh at 12:10 p. m., did not arrive until 2:35. The other trains arrived in the city on time. None of the eastbound trains was delayed.

DENVER PASTOR IN WRECK COMING TO PREACH HERE

The Rev. Thomas Acheson, pastor of a Reformed Presbyterian church in Denver, Col., was hurt in the wreck at Harrisburg early yesterday morning. Mr. Acheson was on his way from New York to Pittsburgh, having an engagement to occupy the pulpit of the Sixth United Presbyterian church, North Highland avenue, the Rev. Dr. Robert M. Russell, pastor, next Sunday. Mr. Acheson is a cousin of J. A. Wilson of 5822 Rippey street, East End, and will be a guest at Mr. Wilson's home.

Sores on Face and Back. Tried Many Doctors Without Success.

GIVES THANKS TO CUTICURA

Capt. W. S. Graham, 1321 Eoff street, Wheeling, W. Va., writing under date of June 14, 1904, says: "I am so grateful I want to thank God that a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. I suffered for a long time with sores on my face and back. Some doctors said I had blood poison, and others that I had barbers' itch. None of them did me any good, but they all took my money. My friends tell me my skin now looks as clear as a baby's, and I tell them all that Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment did it."

Summer Styles In Queen Quality Oxfords and Boots

June Publications and Patterns of M'Call Ready.

The new Patterns are in, 10c and 15c.

June Magazine at the counter, 5c.

June Fashion Sheet around the store. Free.

McCall's Patterns are looked up to by women with the same fidelity that people look to the Weather Predictions, with this difference: McCall is absolutely correct.

"MEN BETTER SHOD.—Have you ever noticed how much better shod men are than women?" asked a woman recently. 'While there are, of course, exceptions, it certainly is true that men who take any pride in their dress always wear good looking shoes.

"'To be sure men's shoes may be said to be more noticeable. Yet in this day of popular walking length skirts, women can no longer neglect their footwear, thinking that their long skirts will hide shoes that are badly worn or run down at the heels.'"

The above appeared in a paper this week, and we are inclined to accept it as a libel on the feminine foot. Very few women in these days allow themselves to wear shoes run down at the heel. They have no call to, since Queen Quality has eliminated the talk of high-priced shoes by teaching women they can wear the most graceful shoes for moderate prices.

Queen Quality Shoes are looked upon today all over this country as the only shoes worthy to come under the name of popular price shoes.

The most comely Oxfords, lasted by the most expert shoemakers, fashioned by noted Queen Quality designers, cost only $3.00. And the foundation leathers are so strong they don't run down at the heel in a week or so. Even the $2.50 Queen Quality Oxfords are noted for their staunch wearing qualities.

Our Shoe Store is well prepared to meet all demands for women's Oxfords—every prevalent style, every preferred leather, and plenty of the wanted tans.

As for Queen Quality Boots, we dare say we have more Summer styles than any woman will give the time to looking over carefully. Your foot fitted perfectly, and the cost will be, according to the grade of shoe, either $3.00 or $3.50.

Summer Shades.

Which Do You Prefer—That of Bamboo Awnings, Vudor Shades, Cloth Awnings or Baltimore Blinds?

We have them all. It's up to you, is a very good way to put it. The cloth awnings are made to order; so are the Baltimore blinds.

The Bamboo Awnings and the Vudor Porch Shades we have in stock, and both kinds have a drop of 8 feet, the widths varying. Both are sold complete with hooks, pulleys and cord, ready to hang.

Bamboo Awnings—

5 feet wide	$ .75
6 feet wide	$ .85
7 feet wide	$1.00
8 feet wide	$1.25
10 feet wide	$1.50
12 feet wide	$1.75

Vudor Awnings—

These come in two colors, mottled effects and dark green.

4 feet wide	$2.00
6 feet wide	$2.50
8 feet wide	$3.50
10 feet wide	$5.00

Baltimore Awnings are a modified style of the old Venetian Blind, and we make them in any size at 30c per square foot. Any size under 20 square feet is charged at the round price of $6.00.

CLOTH AWNINGS are made to measure. A postal or 'phone will bring a representative to your house, who will tell you all about them, and what the cost will be. Best materials are used.

Highland Linen Paper.

The run-away time is drawing on apace, and that means much correspondence. Highland Linen is the paper used by the majority of people. For that reason we carry great quantities of this favorite paper. Not expensive, you know. All the newest sizes and correct envelopes.

You'll find our prices right.

Bicycles for Boys and Girls.

Those of us whose muscles and sinews are not so pliable as they used to be may have given up the bike, but the youngsters still cling to it.

We have a big line and it doesn't take much to own one.

Bikes without coaster brake, $14.75, $16.50, $25.00.

SPECIAL—We have a splendid machine, fitted with coaster brake, selling regularly for $27.50, that we will offer today and tomorrow for $22.50.

Flags for Memorial Day.

May 30th is fast approaching, and if you have no Flag you should give the matter early attention.

We carry a very large line of Silk Flags, Cotton and Wool Bunting Flags and poles and holders.

We also have the printed Muslin Flags.

In all cases our prices are as low as such flags can be sold for.

Today's Sale of Potted Flowers and Plants

Friday, May 12, 1905.

The financial secretary of the Equitable society was under examination yesterday in the inquiry of Superintendent Hendricks of the state insurance department. Mr. Superintendent Hendricks has publicly stated that he intends to find out who are the dummy directors. He seems to be getting close to that interesting information.

President Roosevelt made a short stay in Pittsburgh and made a short speech, but he paid a big compliment to Pittsburgh by describing it as a typical American city, the center of the greatest industries in the world. On its side Pittsburgh regards President Roosevelt as a type of the highest qualities of American character and the greatest ruler in the world.

It is announced that the Citizens party will next week appoint a committee to confer with the Democrats on fusion. A slate will be made up by a dicker made in private by a few party managers, and its election will then be advocated as a means of preventing ring rule! When it comes to ring rule the Citizens party is the real thing, presenting it with a perfection unknown before.

Chairman Elkins of the senate interstate commerce committee has summoned the president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and some other presidents of coal and iron companies to testify upon the railway rate question. Chairman Elkins is coming to the right shop for information, and incidentally he is enlarging his list of witnesses in a gratifying way. There has been some appearance of one-sidedness in the testimony taken by his committee so far.

The congressional committee had still to contend with bad weather yesterday, and a storm interfered with the program for their reception at Marietta. Another stop was made at Blennerhassett island where the committee took dinner. The committee reached Parkersburg in the evening. The magnitude of the interests that would be benefited by the improvement of the Ohio has been strongly impressed upon the committee, and good results will follow from their personal investigation of the merits of the case.

The Canadian government has decided to appoint a commission to see what steps are necessary to preserve Niagara Falls, and to invite the cooperation of New York state authorities. This disposes of the argument urged at Albany last session that if American power companies were not allowed to draw off the water the Canadian companies would. There is still some hope of an indefinite postponement of the time when Niagara Falls will become a dry cliff chiefly attractive to advertising sign painters and bill posters.

The position taken by Mayor Hays in his reply to the Sabbath Observance association is one which public sentiment will sustain. He said that the sale of soda water and lemonade would not be interfered with and that stores selling milk and ice would be permitted to deliver such commodities as late as 10 o'clock on Sunday mornings. Such privileges have become a necessity in the life of a great city for the relief of the poorer class of citizens who have no conveniences of storing supplies, and for whom the corner grocery is both pantry and refrigerator.

Another batch of indictments has been handed down by the grand jury in the Allegheny graft cases, the officials against whom bills have been returned being Director Scandrett, Police Captain James Wilson and Policemen Boland and Trautvetter. Here may be additional opportunities for Hay Philip to get in his modest work. He will produce an interesting situation if he gets newspaper men on trial in Butler county for giving the news about cases going on in Allegheny county. The Gazette will publish the news just the same, and it will have the more to publish on account of the mysterious Hay Philip ramifications.

The Italian government must be credited with looking carefully after the welfare of its people in foreign lands. A recent instance is the intervention of the Italian government to have the case of a poor Italian woman charged with murder in New Jersey appealed to the United States supreme court. This solicitude is habitual. The laborer who digs ditches and is known to the contractor only by the tag he wears cannot be accidentally drowned without an official investigation and a report to the Italian government. The protecting shield of Rome over her citizens still exists in the care Italy takes of her children.

Masked Accusers.

There was a time in Germany when alongside of the ordinary administration of justice, tribunals were set up whose characteristic feature was their secrecy. A person brought before the vehmgerichte found himself confronted with masked accusers and was put upon his defense without knowing who had instituted proceedings or why. The Butler county proceedings against The Gazette with reference to the Allegheny graft cases exhibit an attempt at a return to the medieval method of masked accusation. A person of whom nothing can be discovered but his name alleges that publications made in Allegheny county about the affairs of a municipal corporation in Allegheny county are a crime against the commonwealth of which the courts of Butler county should take cognizance. And the position has been taken that he can set the machinery of the law in operation, cause warrants of arrest to be issued, put defendants to the trouble and expense of putting in their own appearance, while not appearing himself, disclosing his identity or revealing his motive. The accused must stand forth publicly, but the accuser wears a mask.

Such is the curious situation which has led to the offer by The Gazette of a reward of fifty dollars to anyone giving information which will lead to the service of a subpoena upon one Hay Philips, but that information is not forthcoming. Hay Philips has had 16 actions in criminal libel brought against officers and employes of The Gazette and other Pittsburgh papers, but Hay Philips appears to be able to do in secret and hiding what is presumably a public proceeding. He claims the right to bring citizens of Allegheny county to Butler county for trial and to subject the courts of Butler county to the expense of deciding what in their origin are Allegheny county cases, but he accompanies these large pretensions with precautions of complete privacy for himself. The case opens a field for conjecture as to the face or faces really behind that mask. It also suggests that one cause of the rapid increase of judicial business in Pennsylvania which creates such a pressure for more courts and judges is that too great facility is given to unknown persons and masked accusers to set the law in motion. Cases in which a prosecutor is ashamed to show himself are cases which might be safely dismissed without any risk of a denial of justice.

A Noble Spectacle.

Each year the reunions of veterans of the civil war in the north have shown increased toleration and respect for the sentiments that inspired the soldiers of the gray, and if the disposition increases it would not be surprising if the closing musters of these old soldiers should include nearly equal representations from both sections, meeting to recall common deeds of valor. About 500 survivors of the Army of the Potomac have been reviving memories of the great conflict on the fields of Manassas, and old Confederates have taken a prominent part in entertaining them. A majority of the Manassas reception committee of 100 citizens were formerly Confederate soldiers. The sonnet at the literary exercises was prepared and read by a Confederate surgeon.

It was decided to hold the thirty-eighth reunion of the command in Washington next year, and it is likely in that cosmopolitan city, so near to Dixie's land, that the southerners will have a still more active part. A conference was held in Washington yesterday to promote the formation of a society of the blue and the gray whose first session is to be held in connection with the reunion of the Army of the Potomac. When the participants in the war have been reunited there can be no place for the survival of sectional animosity. What an unparalleled event in history—the extinction of the bitterness of civil war in the lifetime of those who fought its battles! The like was never seen before in any country in the world.

No Room for Compromise.

President Roosevelt's decision of character and tenacity of purpose have never been more conspicuously displayed than in the speeches he has made on his way back to Washington. His power of concise and definite expression seems to be, if anything, intensified by his temporary rest from public cares, and he returns to the consideration of the question of public control with perfect readiness to say exactly what he means by it. Nothing could be more clean-cut than this declaration made in his Chicago speech:

"I believe the representatives of the nation should lodge in some executive body the power to establish a maximum rate, the power to have that rate go into effect practically immediately, and the power to see that the provision of the law apply in full to the companies owning private cars just as much as to the railroads themselves. The courts would retain, no matter what the legislature did, the power to interfere and upset any action that was confiscatory in its nature.

There is no room for any compromise there. When congress meets next October it will have to decide whether to stand with the president or the corporations. There is no middle course.

The Harrisburg Horror.

The killing of nearly a score and the wounding of a hundred in the Pennsylvania wreck at Harrisburg occurred under peculiarly horrible circumstances, for the discharge of explosives and the terror of death in the flames were added to injuries caused by the shock of collision. A west-bound train crashed into freight cars that had been forced out on the track by the sudden application of the brakes. Then there was a series of discharges coming from powder in freight cars. It is possible that an investigation may revise the details of what did happen, but the wreck seemed to have been a combination of death-producing accidents.

An inquiry ought to probe the cause of the sudden meeting of a west-bound locomotive with an eastbound freight train that compelled such a sudden stop as to "buckle" cars in the center over on to the westbound rails. The arrival of the colliding passenger train from the east gave almost no interval of time for warning, so the crash appears to have been inevitable. But the explosions that followed have yet to be explained. If it should prove true that there were explosives on the freight train which were set off by the collision or the fire that followed, people will demand some restrictions for traffic in such articles, in order that they may be spared the anxiety of conjecturing the amount of dynamite in every freight train they pass and the possibility of collision with it. Such regulation may be difficult, but dynamite and powder freight have proved to be a menace to life previous to this disaster.

Wears Hosiery Now.

We learn from our esteemed contemporary, the Chanute Tribune, that the once famous statesman, the Hon. Jerry Simpson, has been visiting that Kansas town where a the old days the circumambient air would frequently vibrate with his fervent eloquence. The reporter who interviewed him reports that he is the same old Jerry in looks, but somewhat changed in spirit since he moved to New Mexico and got to making money.

He does not say so, but there is just a conviction in the mind of the man who has talked with him for awhile that he has lost the aspiration and the fine enthusiasm of the crusader, has lost the fire of the earlier years and is content to spend his days in peace and let the generation now on the stage take care of the responsibilities of that generation.

That is apt to be the way of it with agitators as they grow older and wiser. No longer sockless he does not care to sock it into the plutocrats in the good old style. In fact he has got above socks. He told the reporter that hosiery is the word with him now. "I say hosiery because since I have been associating with plutocrats they have told me it was bad form to say socks." But although he is no longer sockless but wears hosiery he retains a reminiscent interest in the old days of Greenback clamor and Populistic reform. It strikes him as odd that Mary Ellen Lease should have gone back to the party she used to vilify with such a wealth of invective. "Think of that voice," he said, "proclaiming the virtues of the Republican party during the last election. Imagine Mary Ellen talking for the plutocrats. Why, I have seen old, gray-headed men, at peace with themselves and the world, under the spell of that raucous voice go home and load up their muskets and get ready for the end of the world."

There are plenty of others who have sun "goodby, old party, goodby" and then come back again. But more remarkable than such conversion is the way in which agitators whose voices once resounded through the nation drop into oblivion. Time was when people went from New York to Medicine Lodge to hear what Jerry Simpson had to say, when national conventions cheered him and hung on his words, and when chairmen of national committees picked their best workers to follow upon his trail. Now he is down and out so far as political influence is concerned, and is quite content to live on the glory of the past and to improve the hosiery connection of the present.

Kaiser Wilhelm should remember that America is much too busy with her baseball season to take the time to read his utterances on the "divine right of kings."

Love that loves and runs away
May some time have the score to pay;
So lovers all be not too rash,
But stop and count the cost in cash.

The president's visit to Chicago and his straightforward utterances ought to convince even the Colorado bears that fear is not one of his characteristics.

Young Rockefeller does not deem it necessary to defend his father. He is right. The old gentleman is able to retain good lawyers for that purpose.

Amid all the horrors of the disastrous railroad wreck there shine instances of human bravery and self-sacrifice that prove that heroism is not dead.

President Roosevelt reserved the work of treeing some of the biggest bears of his hunt until after he struck the Chicago forests.

The spring poet is so busy writing real estate advertisements that he has failed to observe whether spring has sprung or not.

A stone more or less thrown at the Greater Pittsburgh project will only retard, not defeat the enterprise in the end.

New York is to have another fine hotel. The building will be 20 stories high, while the prices will run even higher.

Perhaps the rain came along to help Pittsburgh give the rivers and harbors committee a lift.

TALKED OF IN GOTHAM

By FRANK A. PARKER.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO THE GAZETTE.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—That it was bargain day in babies at the Guild of the Infant Savior in the United Charities building was plainly apparent from the tide of bargain counter enthusiasts and others who turned in the direction of the limestone building at the corner of Fourth avenue and Twenty-second street. The impression that babies were being disposed of to any purchaser at 99 cents, reduced from $1, got hold of the women, and they stormed the rooms of the guild in droves until the manager and her assistants were well nigh distracted. Everybody wanted a baby, from the childless woman of mature years down to the little girl of ten, who thought she preferred an animated doll to one which wouldn't move or cry except mechanically.

Today the prize babies are abandoned twins, John and Mary Brown, two years old, and are the joy and delight of the manager and her assistants. A good home is wanted for them, as twins are never separated. They are bright as two new dollars and very pretty. The Guild of the Infant Savior is one of the two societies in this city that take the abandoned and foundling babies of the city and find good homes for them. Taken from the streets, they are first sent to Bellevue hospital, and every alternate baby sent to the guild, which is a Catholic institution, the others being disposed of by the Protestant agency. Babies are not given out for adoption until the most careful investigation has been made and the prospective home discovered to be a good one. Special agents are employed for this purpose, and as a result scores of foundlings are adopted into kind homes every year.

But when it was announced that it was "bargain day for babies" at the guild everyone wanted a baby, and they came in throngs, expecting to get them offhand. Bitter was the disappointment when it was found that they couldn't be had for the asking.

More Foundlings as Years Pass.

Several women deeply sincere in their demands for babies, wishing to adopt them to fill voids in the family circle, wept bitterly when they found they could not take babies right home with them. But there are, nevertheless, plenty of babies for adoption when claims are satisfactory. One hundred and eight are now at the guild, candidates for good homes, and 180 on the list in the Protestant agency.

"Strangely enough," said the manager, "the number of foundlings is increasing every year. Just why this is I am unable to say, but the fact remains, nevertheless. All our babies are boarded out, many of them being pursued by Italian women. They love children, and we have regular fights sometimes to get them to give them up afterward. They become so attached to them."

A list of names is on tap at Bellevue, one for the Catholic babies and the other for the Protestants. A baby is found on a door step and taken to the hospital. The head name of the Catholic list is given to it. The next foundling takes the Protestant name, and so on down the list.

Old Time Opera Favorite Kills Himself.

Wallace MacCreery, 53 years old, in his day one of the best of comic opera singers, killed himself today by leaping from the deck of the ferryboat Newburgh of the West Shore line, as it was midstream in the North river. He at one time took the part of Ralph Racksiraw in "Pinafore," with the Duff Opera Company, and at other times was a member of the Stetson Opera Company and Maurice Grau's company. He was a former husband of Lottie Gilman, a comic opera singer, now dead. The couple had been divorced. He left this note:

"My name is Wallace MacCreery, opera singer. I could not stand the battle against life any longer. Mr. Hammerstein of Lew Fields' theater often promised me a position as doorkeeper, but I forgive him. Let my body go to the bottom."

Costumes Like Mother Eve Used to Make

On the steamship Majestic, which arrived today, came Dr. A. W. Halsey, secretary of the Presbyterian foreign mission board, who went abroad last September. He and his wife went down the west coast of Africa, visiting mission stations, and made a tour of the Kongo. "The administration of justice among the natives has greatly improved," said Dr. Halsey. "For example, on one of the river boats a white boatman got into a row with a black, and struck the latter on the head with an iron bar. At the next stop the native called in a magistrate, and the man was fined for the assault. A few years ago this was not possible. Our trip extended from Lagos to Loando. The most interesting persons we saw on our journey were the women of Balu. They wear leaves tied about their waist with hemp and a bustle of the same material makes up their costume."

Women in Panic in Subway.

When the cap of the air tank of a Broadway subway train blew off and a fuse burned out simultaneously, near the Ninety-sixth street station, today more than 150 women passengers were thrown into a great alarm, thinking that the train was on fire. Following the report from the air tank and from the fuse the motor box in the motorman's cage caught fire, filling the cars with a blue pungent smoke and bringing the train to a sudden stop. When the guards refused to allow the passengers to leave the cars, many of them attempted to escape by climbing through the windows, and it was some time before they could be quieted.

Chicago's Public Buildings.

In Chicago, on the contrary, there is danger that the public buildings will be in the haphazard style of the private buildings. The library and postoffice already erected have no part in any common scheme, and the most conflicting views are heard as to the new court house and city hall. Civic pride demands the erection of a handsome, noble structure, a fine monument that shall be a symbol of the power and majesty of such a great community.—Chicago Record-Herald.

QUIET OBSERVATIONS

By ERASMUS WILSON.

The orchard lands of long ago!
Oh, drowsy winds, awake and blow
The snowy blossoms back to me,
And all the buds that used to be!
Blow back again the grassy ways,
Oh, truant feet, and like the haze
Of happy summer from the trees
That trail their tresses in the seas
Of grain that float and overflow
The orchard lands of long ago!

Blow back the melody that slips
In lazy laughter from the lips
That marvel much that any kiss,
Is sweeter than the apple is.
Blow back the twitter of the birds.
The lisps, the thrills and all the words
Of merriment that found the shine
Of summer time a glorious wine,
That drenched the leaves that loved it so
In orchard lands of long ago!

Oh, memory! Alight and cling
Where rosy bellied pippins cling,
And golden russets glint and gleam
As in the old Arabian dream—
The fruits of that enchanted tree
The glad Aladdin robbed for me!
And drowsy winds awake and fan
My blood as when it overran
A heart ripe as the apples grow,
In orchard lands of long ago!
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Can you recall the old orchard at home with its wealth of blossoms along about this time of the year?

There are no prettier blossoms than those that decorate the apple tree, and few that have a sweeter fragrance. It is true that the bloom of the crab apple has a stronger fragrance, but it is more pungent and to some it is rather sickening.

The bloom of the wild plum is most profuse and pleasantly fragrant, but its monotonous whiteness makes it second class when compared with the pink and white of the apple bloom.

To forget the orchard lands with their springtime beauty and fragrance, the richness of their summer time promises, and the lusciousness of the autumn's fulfillment, is to sin.

* * *

What a lot of sinners we are, anyway. With beauty and sweetness and goodness around us everywhere we go along grumbling and complaining, with only now and then a feeling of genuine thankfulness.

We say we are thankful, but we don't look it, nor do we get it. We say we are because we can't say anything else in reason. Indeed, we would be ashamed to say it in so many words, but we go around showing it by glum looks and growls and complainings.

The trouble with most of us is that we don't live close enough to nature. Our lives are too artificial. Instead of being simply human, and truly humane, we affect airs and mannerisms that cause us to appear ridiculous in the eyes of the true sons of nature.

The fact is that we are a great lot of fakirs. Not that all are fakirs, nor that the majority of us are conscious of the fact, but that we take fakish, pretentious people as models and ape them in manners, dress and general conduct.

You will agree that a great many people are not what they seem. And while admitting this it may not occur to you that you are not what you seem, and that in the estimation of some of your equals and associates you are a fakir.

* * *

If we could only get back to the simple life, back to the orchard lands, back to the old gardens with their old-fashioned hollyhocks, pineys, marigolds, pinks and honeysuckles, back to the fields rich in grass and grain, we would become more humane.

The nearest approach of God to man is in nature. He is in the blooming bush, the growing grain, the sunshine and the storm. To get away from God is to get away from nature. Now, is there any way in which you can more clearly prove your love for God than by proving your love for nature?

The simple life, of which we speak of in such glowing terms, and of which we had better learn more, is nothing more nor less than a natural life. We all agree that it is the life from which most happiness and prosperity is to be expected, yet we choose to live fictitious lives, and that in spite of the fact they are the more strenuous and yield a minimum of pleasure and not of happiness.

Can't we go back to the orchard lands, and to the old-fashioned gardens which yielded so bountifully of good things to eat, and to look at, and to think about? Can't we get away from human notions and theories and back to God, where is all true happiness?

Hothouse plants are fine and large, but not hardy and fragrant like those that grow under the blue skies, nor are the men and women raised under glass as practical and wholesome as those who grow in the open.

* * *

Fra Wagner came among us preaching the simple life, and society flocked to him en masse; and then he went away, well loaded with coin and other blessings, and society returned to artificial life, the life which Fra Wagner had shown to be foolish, suicidal and ungodly.

It was not what Fra Wagner said that made him famous, but rather what Theodore Roosevelt said of him as the advocate of simple life. Roosevelt believes in simple life, and has followed it. When the strenuous feeling comes over him, as it does sometimes, instead of plunging into the social whirlpool he takes a plunge into the wild fields of nature, and instead of fighting bears in Wall street he fights them in the mountains and jungles of the west.

Roosevelt made Wagner, and as far as his work was concerned it was well done, but the metal in which he wrought proved to be lead, instead of bronze, dull and sodden instead of bright and ringing.

This, however, does not mar the figure, nor does Wagner mar the joyous sweetness of the true simple life.

Do you lead a simple life, or do you ape the vulgar rich? Are you as much interested in the elevation of your fellows as you are in getting ahead of them in the race for social position?

To be very candid with yourself, isn't it money you are after? And isn't it a fact that you want money with which to purchase preferment in the world of society?

* * *

Malcolm J. McLeod has issued an address, "The Culture of Simple Life," which is much more helpful than Wagner's sermons and writings. McLeod goes to the heart of the matter, while Wagner skims the surface.

"The secret of being happy," he says, "is the secret of finding how deep down into the heart sink many of life's commonest blessings. And the simple things again, be it noted, are all about us; they are within the reach of all; they are close to us, by our side, upon our path, at our door. Happiness is a refreshing arm of life's great sea, into which every man may dip his little cup and drink. How unjust would be that law of life which would make it necessary we should leave home to find happiness! Such a rule would make this holy grail reachable only by those having wealth and those free to fly, and only a few in the great army could ever hope to secure the prize. And how equally unfair if one must be famous before being light-hearted! Home should be one of the first spots to go to find the blessed prize, but best of all it is to look within, for the fullest fountains of peace and gladness are in the heart."

Decline of Profanity.

In the "good old days" of long ago it was regarded as a gentleman's privilege to swear, and if his oaths were nicely chosen no offense was felt. It is not so now. Not that profanity is obsolete, but it is pretty nearly so in polite society. It is principally indulged in by uncultured persons or by the tipsy.—Savannah News.

CASTRO'S TRUMP

Richard Harding Davis on the Bowen-Loomis Affair.

Richard Harding Davis, who has visited Venezuela and made a special study of its affairs, has an article on "The Asphalt Scandal" in the current number of Collier's in which he throws some light upon the Bowen-Loomis affair which the president is about to investigate. Speaking of the charge that the Bermudez company paid Mr. Loomis $10,000, Mr. Davis says:

Personally, I never saw the check, but I know men who say they have seen it. They say it is a draft for 57,000 bolivars, which would make in our money about $10,000. Last month when I was in Caracas the check was offered to Capt. Robert Kemp Wright for $5,000. He decided it was worth that to the Bermudez company, but on cabling them for permission to purchase it they answered that they no longer wanted it. The story of the check and its payment to Loomis was told me several years ago.

Those who then followed affairs in Venezuela thought that Loomis was only over-zealous, and regarded the story of the check as merely an invention of the Spanish-American mind, which does not regard bribery of officials or the acceptance of bribes by officials as a serious sin. But the reappearance of the check scandal at this particular moment is interesting. Unless it has changed hands since I was in Caracas, it is now in possession of A. H. Carner, the man Castro has appointed receiver, and who is working in Castro's interests.

Castro's Trump Card.

If such a check is in [illegible] in the hands of Carner, [illegible] the particular card that [illegible] man as Carner would play at this particular moment. An ultimatum has been served upon his friend and employer, President Castro. Having served it, the secretary of state, who hurled it, departs for Genoa. The president of the United States is absent on his vacation, and the affairs of the state department that sent the ultimatum are in the hands of Francis B. Loomis, the man who received the check. What moment for its production could be more propitious? As a weapon for blackmail it had lost its power; as a means of embarrassing the enemies of Castro, it could never be more effective.

Of the truth of all of Mr. Bowen's charges Mr. Loomis has made a sweeping denial. He agrees that such a check as the one Carner is now hawking about the streets and foreign legations of Caracas exists, but he explains that it was given him by the Bermudez company in return for one of his own for a like amount. The reason for this exchange was that the Bermudez company allowed him the proper New York rate of exchange, which he could not obtain elsewhere in Caracas.

Mr. Bowen's Charges.

Mr. Bowen's charges were filed at Washington before either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Hay left that city, and it does not seem likely that had they believed Mr. Loomis guilty they would have gone away leaving him in supreme authority at the state department.

It is said that before leaving Washington the only witness the president called in reference to Mr. Loomis, and who perfectly satisfied the president as to the innocence of Mr. Loomis, was Gen. Avery D. Andrews, the vice president of the asphalt company. This is the only really funny incident in this whole sordid scandal. It makes one fear that for the moment the president lost his sense of humor.

Mr. Bowen is said to have been misled into making these charges through a personal dislike of his superior officer. But Mr. Bowen is not a fool.

Incidents of His Record.

He is brusque, aggressive and ambitious, but before The Hague tribunal and at Washington as the representative of Venezuela, where he was opposed to the ambassadors of the nations, he showed capabilities superior to those of diplomats much older and more experienced than himself. He is the man who gave the name "shirt sleeve diplomacy" to the methods of the United States diplomats. When a Spanish mob attacked his consulate at Barcelona, Mr. Bowen refused the aid offered by the other Americans in the city, and held off the mob with a gun until the cavalry cleared the streets and rescued him. And when at the legation in Caracas, the agent of the Bermudez Asphalt Company laid a blank check on his desk and invited him to fill it out, he carried it into the next room, where were seated W. W. Russell, our present minister to Colombia, and the naval attache, and told them the agent must never enter the legation, and why. That was one time that Mr. Bowen showed he was not a fool, even if he were honest. He knew that the only check an American minister can afford to accept from the asphalt people is a blank check. But it lies, and every one is satisfied that it should lie, with Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hay to decide whether Mr. Bowen was misinformed, or whether Mr. Loomis is guilty.

IN ST. JAMES' COURT

The London Mail on Partiality for American Ambassadors.

"Instinctively we s[illegible] the American ambassador from [illegible] his colleagues in the diplomatic corps. He is the only one who really reaches the masses. He is the only one in whom the people, as a whole, have any interest. [illegible] is it expected that he will be [illegible] official and more of a man. [illegible] hears of the Russian or German ambassador being asked to lecture before [illegible] philosophical or historical [illegible] invited to a literary dinner. They [illegible] their colleagues are permitted to [illegible] outside all but a fraction of the [illegible] life. They may entrench themselves behind the ramparts of society and [illegible] seldom, and none will seek to drag them forth. The public at large knows [illegible] nothing of them, and does not care to [illegible] anything. They are what the American ambassador never is—they are [illegible] and treated as such. We surrender them cheerfully to Downing street, the Court and the West End. The vast majority of the people do not even know them by name. We ought to make a distinction between the American and other ambassadors. It would be against the grain of nature if we did not. We simply cannot help treating him rather as a distinguished national guest than as an accredited official.

Overwhelmed With Invitations.

"Ever before he lands on English soil he is pounced upon by the mayor and corporation of Southampton, an address of welcome fired at him on shipboard, and a speech extorted in reply. And that is but a foretaste of what is to come. Throughout his stay among us we presume inordinately on his acquaintance with English. There must I have often thought, be times when we force him to wish he spoke Basque and Basque only, and did not 'the faith and morals hold that Milton held.' So might he live among us and possess his soul in quietude—a diplomatist, and not a public character. But as it is, no sooner has he presented his credentials than the bombardment begins. I must admit at once it is most vigorously replied to, England and the American ambassador set to forthwith to see which can spoil the other the most. Chambers of commerce swoop down upon him and bear him off in triumph as their guest of honor. The Omar Khayyam club points an invitation at his head, demanding unconditional surrender. The Dante society insists on his escorting its members through the infernal regions. The Wordsworth society, the Browning society, the Bos club, the Sir Walter Scott club—all press their claims. The Birmingham and Midland institute indignantly elects him as its annual president, and exists by way of tribute an address on Benjamin Franklin. The Edinburgh Philosophical institution bestows the same honor for the price of a paper on Abraham Lincoln. And so it goes on. The big public schools, knowing that he is an American, and therefore swapped up in education, play upon his weakness and lure him into distributing their prizes. Political leagues expect him to tell them all about the United States supreme court. The historic city companies never let go of him. He is a standing feature on the toast list of the Guildhall banquet. Charitable and philanthropic societies pursue him relentlessly. Working men's institutes, trading on his democratic sympathies, bid for an evening's loan of his presence and voice. Libraries refuse to be opened except by him. He is the obvious man to unveil a bust or a portrait. The organizers of a dinner in honor of a famous English merchant turn to the American embassy for the orator of the occasion.

America's Own Fault.

"After all, I suppose, it is partly America's own fault. She should not send us such charming, cultivated, broad-gauged men, Adams, Lowell, Phelps, Bayard, Hay, and Choate—what other country has sent us representatives to compare with them? The capacity of a long line of American ambassadors to warm both hands at the cheerful fire of English existence has been so palpable, their interests have so manifestly stretched beyond the humdrum game of protocols and dispatches, they touch life at so many more points than the ordinary professional diplomat, that we should hardly know what to do if the United States accredited to the court of St. James had one short of her best. A tongue-tied, unsociable, purely official American ambassador has become unthinkable in this country. We calmly take it for granted that the representative of the United States, whoever he may be, will be a first-class after-dinner speaker, and able and willing at any time to deliver an address, preside at a meeting, or unveil a monument. And so he invariably is. Why, then, should we not use him for our profit and entertainment?

Whitelaw Reid Had Better Be Prepared.

"At present we turn the American ambassador into a sort of lecturer to the nation, and demand from him at every turn eloquence and yet more eloquence, versatility and yet more versatility. We launch him on an oratorical tour from Land's End to John o' Groat's in placid forgetfulness that he may, after all, have business of his own, or his country's, to attend to. I can imagine Mr. Whitelaw Reid at this moment frantically preparing himself for the fray, re-reading all the standard authors he has forgotten, composing character sketches by the bushel of famous Americans, working up 'local color,' and dictating not less than one 'occasional address' a day. Only by thus arming himself beforehand will he be able, when he has settled down among us, to feel himself a free man."

Tribute from South.

The following sonnet, dedicated to the Army of the Potomac, was read at the reunion of the survivors of that organization on the battlefield of Manassas, Wednesday, by Dr. Henry M. Clarkson, a confederate:

They tell a legend of two knights of old.
Two haughty men, who on the highway met;
Of brave, of kindred stock were they, and yet
With fiery speech, and anger uncontrolled,
They each drew lance against his kinsman's hood,
Because a shield, suspended 'tween the two,
To each brought only one side into view,
And one had said 'twas brass—the other, gold.

And so ever this deep fought—for thus the tale is told—
Till both were winded, when, in changing place,
Each saw the shield, but viewed its other face.
One fell. The other lowered his lance. Behold,
No more they strive. Their rash dissensions cease,
And each extends the open palm of peace.

Make Them Fit to Survive.

It is trite to say that no nation can afford to allow its children to go undefended. That means national peril and decay. There is no greater "race suicide" than that. To those who cry out that any attempt on the part of the municipality to provide against this evil will mean "pauperization," it should be sufficient to point out that our public school system itself has grown out of "pauper" beginnings. And to those who take refuge behind the old idea of the "survival of the fittest," I suggest that to make as many as possible fit to survive in the better sense for civilized citizenship.—Independent.

SAY DECISION COVERS THE CASE

Supreme Court Has Written Opinion Which Sustains Act Similar to Cook Bill.

WHOLE BENCH CONCURRED

City Solicitor W. B. Rodgers, in his argument before the supreme court in defense of the constitutionality of the Cook Greater Pittsburgh act, said he was willing to rest his case on the decision of the supreme court in Blankenburg vs. Black. In his opinion the finding of the justice there fits the question at issue.

In 1901 the legislature enacted a law providing that "there shall be elected in each county co-extensive in boundary with a city of the first class, three persons to serve as members of the board of revision of taxes." Rudolph Blankenburg sought to have the act declared unconstitutional on the ground that it was local and special legislation. He succeeded, but the decision is believed to show that the Greater Pittsburgh act is of a different character and is general. It provides "that where the cities situate in the same county, are or may be contiguous," the city having the smaller poulation may be annexed to the one of larger population. It is pointed out that the words, "are or may be contiguous," make the act applicable in many parts of the state outside of Pittsburgh and Allegheny.

After quoting the title of the act of 1901 as printed above to show that the law which Blankenburg sought to have declared unconstitutional, could apply to Philadelphia alone, Justice Mitchell wrote this opinion:

"This description cannot apply either at the present time or in the proximate future to any county but Philadelphia, and for that reason the act is distinctly local and special. It cannot be sustained on the ground of classification, for it is outside of all the principles on which classification is permissible. The rule is stated in Lloyd vs. Smith, 176 Pa. 213, that "a law which does not exclude any one of a class, and applies to all the members of the class equally, is general," and the converse is also true that a law which does permanently exclude any one from the class must be special.

"The fact that the law applies to only one county now would not be a sufficient objection if in the natural progress of events under existing laws others may grow into the class hereafter. But the way must be clear for them to do so. No such way is left open by this statute. It is not a law relating to cities of the first class, but to counties co-extensive with them and there is no other county than Philadelphia, which is now so co-extensive in boundary, nor is there any law on the statute books by which any other county can become so. If any city shall hereafter grow into the first class, as Pittsburgh is rapidly doing, its county will not come under this act without further legislation to enable it to do so, and even then it will come in not by virtue of any generality in this act, but by the provisions of such subsequent legislation. So far as the operation of this act is concerned it not only applies to but one county now, but permanently excludes all others. That is not classification, but special and local legislation on a forbidden subject.

This decision was concurred in by all of the justices and all of them, with the exception of Justice McCullum, are still on the bench.

AMALGAMATED VOTES ON INCREASE FOR 30,000 MEN

Convention Adopts Sheet Steel and Iron and Tin Plate Scales—New Man for President.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

DETROIT, MICH., May 11.—Thirty thousand sheet, steel and iron workers, sheet mill hands and tin plate workers will receive an increase in wages averaging 18 per cent, if the manufacturers grant the scales adopted by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers in the convention this afternoon.

The regular bi-monthly settlement of the puddlers scale which was to have been made here tomorrow, will be adjusted in Youngstown. As the result of an invitation from Gov. Herrick of Ohio and Mayor Bassell of Columbus, it is expected that the next convention will be held in Columbus.

Interest in the contest for the presidency is augmented by the entrance into the race of Thomas Williams of Vincennes, Ind.

CLUB OFFICERS ARE ARRESTED.

Three Informations Against Them for Alleged Illegal Liquor Selling.

Charles Singleton, Charles Wright and Peter Charles, alleged to be the proprietors of the Dolphin club, a colored club in Elm street, were arrested yesterday on charges of selling liquor on Sunday, selling liquor without a license and running a gambling house. The informations were made for George Brown, a negro, before Alderman John Groetzinger. Brown also made another information charging Singleton with assault and battery.

It is alleged that Brown and Singleton got into a row in the Dolphin club on Monday night last. The two men went to the Bedford avenue basin to settle the matter. Singleton made an information against Brown for assault and battery and the latter gave bail in the sum of $300 for a hearing before Alderman Reilly this afternoon. Wright and Charles gave bail in $1,500 each for a hearing on Monday at 2 p. m.

FRIENDLY SUIT ENTERED TO TEST AUTOMOBILE TAX

A famous New York Hatter makes Oetting's Hats

There isn't any "have-to" about wearing a flat brim derby—though it's a very popular style just now.

Many of my friends and customers are wearing Roycroft Derbies and think they are a great improvement over the prevailing derby styles.

The crown is of medium height and rather full, looking at it from the side it has an elongated appearance.

The brim is rather narrow on the side and curled much like the brim in the above picture.

I can't describe it any plainer without using a lot more words, so come to either of our stores and see in one glance the style that mere words fail to fully describe.

Best hats $4 and $3.

Next best

HUNDREDS CHEER THE PRESIDENT

Greets Huge Crowd in Union Station and Delivers Typical Roosevelt Speech.

SAYS BEARS BEHAVED WELL

Tanned and sunburned, tired but happy, President Theodore Roosevelt greeted a crowd of 1,500 people from the rear end of Pullman car "Rocket" in Union station about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, during a stop of 15 minutes, while engines were changed to carry him and his party through to Washington. He arrived at the capital at midnight.

Long before the arrival of the train the crowd began to gather and pressed thickly against the gates until the spectators were lined up 20 deep. About 400 passengers, detectives, policemen, and others privileged to pass through the gates, were lined up, waiting for the special as it entered the station. An accommodation train standing on the opposite track from the president's train was turned into a grandstand by the police, who ordered a portion of the crowd to board it. Bluecoats lined the track on both sides of the special and held the crowd 50 feet back from the rear platform.

Cheers for the President.

As the train entered the station and the president was seen standing on the rear platform, a tremendous cheer went up from the crowd in which the president joined, waving both hands high into the air.

After a moment's silence the president cried out:

"Sergeant, you can let that crowd come up here and I'll say a word of greeting."

A roar of approval escaped from the crowd, and it surged forward.

Harry B. Herr, a signalman for the railroad company, made his way to the rail of the car, carrying his infant son, Harry B. Herr, Jr., on his arm, and introduced him to the president, who shook the youngster's hand.

"How old is he?" asked the president.

"Two years and four months," replied the proud parent.

"Fine boy, fine boy!" exclaimed the president, smiling his famous smile.

In a moment a score of men stretched forth their hands.

"Can't shake hands, gentlemen," he announced. "If I shake one hand I'll have to shake them all."

Stepping to the center of the car platform he began:

Typical American City.

"Now, gentlemen, I can't talk very long. I want to tell you that I appreciate the fact that your city is one of typical American industry. I've had three weeks vacation and enjoyed myself thoroughly. The bears were well behaved. I have learned to think a great deal of Colorado—I enjoyed the scenery, I enjoyed the bears and I enjoyed the human.

"I need not say that I feel that I know you, and remember how you thought of me last fall. I am going back to work, and all I can say is that I will try to carry on the government in such shape that every man shall have justice; that there shall be equal rights for all and special privileges for none."

A tremendous cheer followed this declaration. Continuing the president said:

"I think the average American citizen is a pretty good citizen, and all that is necessary is for him to know that the other fellow is a good fellow as well, and to understand one another.

Admirer of Railroad Men.

"I want to say a special word to these railroad men. I am an admirer of railroad men. They take great risks, work hard, have irregular hours, and must know how to take and give orders. Before a man knows these things he is not a good citizen. Good-bye and good luck."

The president then entered the car, but was brought out again by repeated calls for a bear story.

"Where are the bears?" asked someone.

"They are coming by freight; they are dead, you know," replied the president, smilingly.

"Did you use the snuff?" asked a gray-bearded veteran, who was standing close to the platform rail.

"No, we used nothing but guns. I'm afraid you are not a good bear hunter," replied the president as he left the platform for the last time.

The man who had asked the question was W. F. Weible, of Allegheny, who was a ram-fleeter on the Mississippi river during the Civil war.

Sneezed Themselves to Death.

Mr. Weible says that when a boy he placed snuff-covered bait in the woods, which was eaten by rabbits, who promptly sneezed so hard that they broke their necks, and his hardest work was to gather them up in the morning. He wrote a letter to the president while he was at Glenwood Springs, Col., advising him to try the experiment on the bears, and declared he was firm in the belief that the experiment would work. Mr. Weible recently sent the president a program from the inaugural ball of President Garfield, and in return received from the president a program of his recent inaugural ball.

Among those in the party with the president who appeared upon the platform were Secretary Loeb, Dr. Lambert and Edward Pinoet, who boarded the train at Chicago.

The special was taken out by engine 2435, class E, the finest of modern makes, and J. W. Gilchrist was at the throttle. W. G. Wareham was fireman; Donald Campbell, brakeman; G. L. Isenberg, conductor, and C. F. Amend, flagman, while Assistant Road Foreman S. M. Dobson accompanied the crew.

APPEAL TO MAYOR.

Sabbath Observance Association Wants Him to Force Small Shopkeepers to Close on Sunday.

Mayor W. B. Hays has been asked by a committee of the Sabbath Observance association of Allegheny county to force small shopkeepers to pay some attention to the law prohibiting Sunday selling.

The Rev. Dr. J. T. McCrory, chairman of the committee, went into detail on the subject of Sunday selling, and was listened to attentively by the mayor. The latter replied that whenever complaints were received concerning violation of the Sunday laws, they would be investigated and the violators prosecuted. He said there would be no interference with stores selling soda water or other soft drinks, and that all shops selling meat, ice, milk and such commodities would be permitted to deliver goods as late as 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

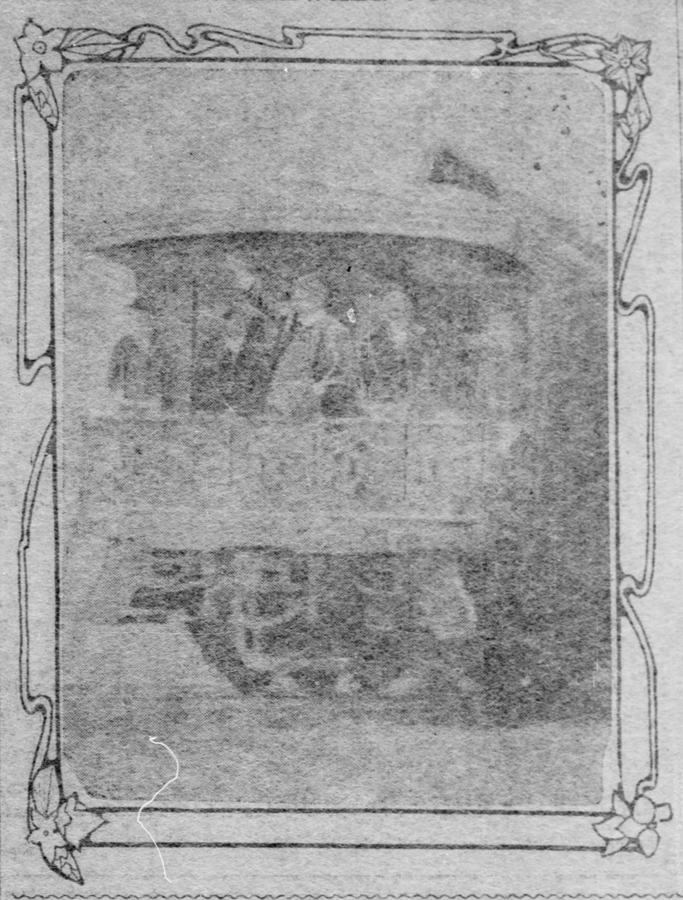
PRESIDENT'S FAREWELL TO PITTSBURGH



The Death Roll.

George Fournier.

George Fournier, the oldest policeman in McKees Rocks, died yesterday. Mr. Fournier was born in Germany 71 years ago and came to America in 1855. He served in several official capacities in McKees Rocks and was the first policeman appointed. He was a member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church of McKees Rocks. Besides his widow, three daughters and one son survive him. They are: Mrs. M. E. Brady, Mrs. W. C. Neal, Mrs. William Rushwey, all of McKees Rocks, and F. J. Fournier of McKeesport. Four brothers and two sisters also survive him.

Mrs. Sarah J. McFarland.

Mrs. Sarah J. McFarland, aged 73, died yesterday morning at the home of her son, 6041 Thomas boulevard, East End. Mrs. McFarland was born in Virginia, but had been a resident of Washington, D. C., for more than 50 years, prior to coming to Pittsburgh some six years ago. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. W. Dunn of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Edward Barry of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. E. C. Makosky of Frederick, Md., and two sons, William D. McFarland of Washington, D. C., and Walter M. McFarland of the Westinghouse Electric Company of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. William Menzel.

Mrs. Dorothy Menzel, aged 28, wife of William Menzel, died yesterday at her home, 1322 Schley avenue, Sylvsvale, from pneumonia. She was born in Germany and came to this country when 10 years of age, settling in Braddock, where she was a member of the German Lutheran church. She had lived two years in Swissvale. Besides her husband she is survived by her father, Charles Kopp, seven sisters and two brothers, of Sylvsvale.

Obituary Notes.

Clark O'Donnell, aged 24, a former resident of Braddock, died yesterday at Emsley, Ala., where he was employed in the rod mill. He is survived by his mother, three brothers and a sister, all of Donora.

Mrs. Mary Thrasher, aged 43, wife of T. H. Thrasher, died late Wednesday night at her home in Grandview avenue, East Pittsburgh, after a long illness, due to dropsy. She is survived by her husband, one son, her mother and two sisters.

Henry Rees, aged 93, died Wednesday at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Geyer, 4751 Butler street, Lawrenceville. He was born in Wales and had lived in this country for 45 years. He was a blacksmith by trade and is survived by a son, John Rees, of Indianola, and a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Morgan, of Bessemer, Ala.

Walter T. Barnes, aged 31, died yesterday at the home of his brother, John L. Barnes, East Eleventh avenue, McKeesport, from tuberculosis. He is survived by the following brothers and sisters: James, Los Angeles; Frank M. and John L., McKeesport; Mrs. W. G. Blend, East McKeesport; Mrs. Nellie Hoarty and Mrs. W. J. Parkhurst, Baltimore.

Colorado Vacations

become more popular year by year. Last year about 50,000 eastern people spent all or part of their vacations there.

Good reasons for it, of course. Here are some of them:

Climate always delightful.

Recreation in many forms.

Living accommodations to suit every purse and every taste.

Only one night on the road from Chicago and St. Louis by the Burlington's famous fast trains.

Ticket rates always low—but lower this summer than for years.

Ask me questions about Colorado vacations. They will be answered correctly, promptly, courteously.

FEDERAL STREET—PARK WAY—SOUTH DIAMOND

HOLDS AN OPTION ON GIRL'S HEART

That Is Way the Attorney Puts It in the Gibney-Steiner Breach of Promise Suit.

DEFENDANT TELLS HIS STORY

The extraordinary proceeding of taking a six-months' option on a woman's love was admitted by Klaus J. Steiner yesterday afternoon while on cross-examination in the United States court in the breach of promise suit brought against him by Miss Edith Isabella Gibney of St. Louis, who asks for $50,000 damages. The defendant was on the witness stand during much of the afternoon and was subject to a searching cross-examination by Attorney C. A. O'Brien. He stated that both parties to the engagement had "made up" for a probation of six months.

"This was a kind of option?" questioned Attorney O'Brien.

"Yes," answered the defendant.

"An option on the plaintiff's affections for six months, as we understand it. Do you mean to tell us that you were of a mind to marry the plaintiff?" (This referred to a period in the engagement after a quarrel between the lovers.)

"No."

"Then what in the world did you want with the option?"

"I wanted to test my love."

Produced a Sensation.

This feature of the cross-examination produced a sensation in the crowded courtroom. Preceding this the witness had testified that Miss Gibney had broken the engagement and his father had suggested they patch up their differences by each agreeing to a six-months' probation, it being agreed that if at the end of that time they felt that they loved one another enough for marriage, the marriage should go on. On the other hand, the engagement could be broken by either party at will.

It was here that the climax was reached in yesterday's session of the trial before Judge Joseph Buffington. Half the morning had been spent reading the gushing love letters which Steiner had written his old sweetheart. Attorney W. B. Ashley, who read the letters, had almost lost his voice, the number of "exhibits" reached 82 and the crowd in the courtroom still hungered for more.

The letters fill two immense scrapbooks and the number of missives reaches into the hundreds. They are written in the archaic style of the sixteenth century, exhibiting more nonsense than philosophy and more gush than poesy. The reading of the tender tokens caused much amusement in the courtroom and Judge Buffington bruised his knuckles in rapping for order when a burst of laughter followed some particularly sentimental passage.

Not Guilty of Plagiarism.

There were those among the idle spectators yesterday who declared that Steiner had used copiously from the pages of "Ready Letter Writer" or from somebody's "Correspondent's Guide." Such a voluminous correspondence, however, it seems, would free the defendant from the added charge of plagiarism.

In September, 1903, Steiner wrote a letter every day from the Phelps Medical and Surgical sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich. One of these epistles, dated September 20, is as follows:

My Dearest Little Girl—How overjoyed I was to receive your most delightful reprimand and veiled message of love! Myt but you can hand out scathing denunciation! The angel with the flaming sword drove evil out of Paradise no more ruthlessly than did your invective against my indiscretions drive from my mind any further intentions on my part to sin against your wishes and desires. Sweetheart, you are always beautiful. You are beautiful in your love and in your way of chiding me. I can imagine how beautiful even would be your hate. No; I do not believe you could hate me. I think that if anything were to occur between us, as would end in hate among ordinary mortals, would find your lovely mind filled, not with unresisting hate, but the pity and sorrow that God hath taught thee to hold against those who transgress the laws.

My love for you, however, is so strong that the probability of my allowing anything to happen of such an unspeakable nature, in so far as I am at fault, is about as remote as the probability that some day I will become the king of England. . . . . Dearest, you are mine and I am yours, and beyond that there is nothing but heaven. Oh, I long for a touch of your dear hands!

KLAUS.

He Needed Watching.

About this time Steiner sent his photograph to Miss Gibney's sister, Alice. The letter which accompanied the picture is as follows:

My Dear Sister Alice—"Be not afraid, it is only I." Regard him carefully and keep your eye upon him for he needs watching. On the face of "it" he looks perfectly harmless, but remember this is a counterfeit presentiment, and that hidden behind it is a most intense desire to appropriate some of your sisterly affection, under the guise of cultivating your acquaintance. Very truly,

KLAUS J. STEINER.

Sometimes, it was testified, more than one letter was written a day. An example of this is found in the following:

Allegheny, Pa., March 9, '04.

My Dearest Edith: Two letters in one day is like expecting a hen to lay twice per diem—but two yolks in one egg is common. So you will just consider this an extra yolk to the "lay" I sang this morning. * * * I love you, dear, because you are so very lovable in every way * * * for your dear self; and because I MUST love you. I need you near me always that I may lavish upon you this adoration and devotion that is being formed within me as constantly and as measureful as the sun brings forth light and heat and spreads them broadcast. It is thoughts like these that will come to me and convince me how threadbare is life without that which the heart demands for solace. You are my solace, my joy and my peace, and the millenium of my life shall commence the very day that I can call you mine before the world. Adoringly,

KLAUS.

Cold Ending to Engagement.

The last letter in the collection, written August 1, 1904, to terminate all relations between the couple, is addressed to "Miss Edith I. Gibney," is as chilly as the foregoing are effusive. It follows:

My Dear Miss: I have exercised my right under our agreement and the engagement is terminated herewith. Yours very truly,

KLAUS J. STEINER.

When the case was resumed at 10 o'clock yesterday morning the plaintiff was called to the stand, and all the forenoon session and until nearly 3 o'clock in the afternoon she was subject to the trying ordeal. Her sister, Miss Marguerite Gibney was the next witness for the prosecution and the other was K. L. Steiner, of Chislett street, East End, the plaintiff's uncle. Mr. Shiras opened for the defense, and the defendant and his father and mother were called as witnesses.

Under cross-examination Miss Gibney said she had spent seven years at St. Charles' convent, that she was a Roman Catholic and one sister was a nun. She was asked how long her sister had been in the church, but under objections the question was withdrawn.

Mr. Dickey asked: "What is the religion of the defendant?"

The answer was: "I don't know that they have any religion."

The plaintiff said she had not attended the German Evangelical Lutheran church with the family, and that the family never went to church while she was there.

Not Broken by Her.

Miss Gibney denied that she had ever broken the engagement, or that she had laid aside the engagement ring for longer than three hours. She had threatened to break it off if the family did not stop persecuting her.

Attorney Dickie tried time and again during a rigid cross-examination to get Miss Gibney to admit that she had broken the engagement, but she repeatedly denied that she had done so.

"Did you not break the engagement yourself, while visiting at the defendant's home?" Mr. Dickey asked.

"No; I did not. I was worried and sick at the way I was treated, but I did not break the engagement."

"Did you not tell the defendant that he had not the means to support a wife and that the engagement had better end?"

"I did not," Miss Gibney said.

Asked if the defendant knew her religious beliefs, the witness replied that he and his whole family were well aware of it.

Miss Marguerite Gibney, the plaintiff's sister, testified that she lived with her mother and five sisters at 4334 Washington boulevard, St. Louis. Her father has been dead for some time and her mother is an invalid. Her mother's state of health was objected to by the attorneys for the defense and the objection was sustained.

Sister Tells of Engagement.

"I remember very well," she said, "the time of my sister's engagement to Mr. Steiner. It was in August, 1903, and she spent the whole of the following winter in making her wedding clothes and preparing for the wedding, which was to take place the next June. I was at home at the time of the defendant's visit at our home in October, 1903. He stayed with us 10 days, making his home at our house."

"Was he kind to you all?" asked Mr. O'Brien.

The witness replied that he was "more than kind."

Mr. O'Brien asked if she remembered the visit of the plaintiff to the Steiners in the spring of 1904. She replied that she did and well, too.

"When she left home she was smiling and happy," the witness said. "When she came home seven weeks later she was a perfect wreck. She looked as though she had had typhoid fever. We were all terribly shocked."

Mr. Dickey objected to this kind of testimony and the objection was sustained.

"Your family is very popular in St. Louis, is it not?" asked Mr. Dickey.

Miss Gibney did not catch the question and Mr. Dickey repeated it.

"I would not say that," the witness said in a hurt tone, and the question was not urged.

Uncle Testifies for Plaintiff.

R. L. Steiner was called and testified that the plaintiff was his niece and that he had known her since she was a child. She first visited them in 1895, and again from October, 1902, till October, 1903. He said the defendant visited Miss Gibney at the witness' home.

The prosecution then rested and Mr. Shiras opened for the defense in a short address to the jury. He said that no denial of a promise to marry would be made and continued:

But we will show you that the plaintiff broke the engagement herself, that her reason for so doing was that the defendant did not rise to her ideal or expectation of a husband for her. We will also show that the defendant's father got them into the library together with his wife and other members of the family and asked them not to be hasty, but to agree to a six month's or a year's provisional engagement, and if at the end of that time they still loved one another well enough there would be no objection from him to the marriage taking place. But in case one or the other wished the engagement to cease and that no marriage between them take place then the affair between them should end. We will show that both of them agreed to that arrangement and that it was as binding on one as on the other. This is not a matter of sentiment for you to settle. It is a legal question of right. We will further show that the plaintiff said, at the time the provisional engagement was made, that she considered it more honorable to break an engagement to marry than to have the marriage rites solemnized and then break the ties in the divorce court.

Defendant Gives His Side.

The defendant was then called in his own defense. He went to the witness stand with a confident air, and spoke out plainly, but at times was ridgety and apparently embarrassed at some of the questions asked him on cross-examination.

Steiner said he was 30 years of age and resides with his parents and three sisters at 526 Church avenue, Allegheny.

"Do you and your father's family belong to church?" asked Mr. Dickey.

This was objected to by Mr. O'Brien, but the objection was overruled, and the witness said the family are members of the First German Evangelical Protestant church, at East Ohio street and Church alley, Allegheny.

"Were you ever baptized?" was the next question. Judge Buffington objected to this question and it was not answered.

The witness then went on to say that he does not deny that he and Miss Gibney were engaged to be married and that for several months he was very much in love with her, or thought he was. In regard to the conversation which led to the plaintiff's breaking the engagement, as he alleges she did, he said:

We had a long conversation on the street about our affairs and it was concluded in our house. I was walking along beside her feeling very much downhearted. I did not like the way she had been acting. The first I noticed wrong with her was when we had a discussion over music and the way she acted then worried me not a little. I told her the way she acted with my people was very disagreeable to them as well as myself and that I did not at all like it. She then flew into a rage and entered a terrible tirade against my parents and my sisters, saying they had picked her to pieces, ran me down to her and that she believed they were running her down to me. I told her that was not true. That enraged her more than ever, and she said: "Very well. This will be the end."

I noticed on Monday following this that she did not have on our engagement ring nor had she it on on Wednesday.

"Well, how about this meeting in the library with your father and mother and your sister?" asked Mr. Dickey, and the witness replied:

It was Wednesday morning. Edith and I were in the parlor and she was crying. Mother came in and seeing Edith in tears, made us go in with her to father in the library. Father asked her what the trouble was and she said: "I have decided that Klaus and I are not suited to one another. My ideal is very high. He is fickle and I guess it would be best for us to break the engagement." Father told her not to act hastily and advised us to go into a probatory condition, or, in other words, to enter into a probation agreement for six months or a year, and if within that time either of us found that we did not love the other well enough to marry the contract would be annulled. But if we both still loved one another we could then be married without any objection. Father said of course there was a difference in which we had been brought up, but that need make no difference.

Wanted to Be Out of Suspense.

Edith said: "Well, I want to be out of suspense." Father replied: "Do you want to go home with a broken engagement and a broken heart?" But she made no answer. Mother repeated the probation contract and Edith said:

"I love Klaus too much to stand in his way and I will give him up if he says so."

Before this she had said in regard to the probation contract: "Why that is a very simple way. Why did we not think of that before?"

I did not tell her I had threatened to leave home if my folks objected to my marrying her, but I told her my mother had collapsed over our troubles.

Mr. Dickey asked the witness a number of questions from a typewritten copy of the plaintiff's evidence given on Wednesday and he replied:

I accompanied Edith to the railway station when she started for home at the end of her visit with us, but I did not say to her at the station what she says I did. I did say, however: "Look at me, little girl, and tell me you will not give me up." And I did not take her in my arms and tell her she was my dearly beloved wife as she says. I had no opportunity of that sort.

His letters to her were shown him in the two scrap books and he acknowledged he had written them, and her letters to him were also shown him and he recognized them as one he had written.

Blame Plaintiff for Breach.

On cross-examination the witness admitted the engagement, but declared Miss Gibney had broken it on Sunday, May 15, 1904, and on the following Wednesday had released him. He then related the incident in the library, where his father called the lovers together and urged them to "make-up." The father had proposed a probation period of six months or a year, after which time they could decide for themselves whether the engagement should terminate in marriage.

This was the agreement which Attorney O'Brien termed a "six-months-option," much to the merriment of the spectators.

"Did you accompany Miss Gibney to the station when she returned to St. Louis?" asked the attorney.

"I did."

"Did you take her in your arms on parting."

"No; I did not have the opportunity."

At this another roar of laughter broke out in the rear of the room.

D. A. Steiner, father of the defendant, was next called and recited in detail the meeting in the library. Little new evidence was developed. Mrs. Steiner, the defendant's mother, gave her version of the same meeting, and testified that she noticed a marked change in Miss Gibney's demeanor about the second week of her visit at the Steiner home.

"After the engagement she was far above my own daughters," declared Mrs. Steiner, indicating that the plaintiff had acted in a haughty manner.

At this point court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

Most Regal of Women, Queen of His Heart

Written upon a card enclosing a gift-book, "Her Royal Highness—Woman," was the following effusion:

"Sweetheart—Royal blood is excellent, a royal mind and character are better; thou hast both. The regality of thy beautiful spirit and personage are beyond compare. I worship before thee as I would before the Sovereign of the Universe, thou most regal of women and queen of my heart. "KLAUS."

DISCUSS PRIVATE SUPPLY OF WAR MATERIALS

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A conference was held at the war department today between Secretary Taft, Secretary Morton, the chief ordnance officers of the war and navy departments, President McIlvaine, of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and Messrs. Johnson and Meigs, of that company, to develop the possibility of supplying war materials to the government by private concerns. This is a precautionary measure to provide against an emergency should guns or ammunition be needed by the government beyond the capacity of the government yards to supply.

CHOATE ENIGMATICAL ON EQUITABLE RUMOR

LONDON, May 11.—(Special.)—Ambassador Choate had not read the report in this morning's paper that the chairmanship of the Equitable society would be offered to him. When asked if he had had any intimation to that effect, he said enigmatically: "I suppose when I go back many things will be open."

IMPROVEMENTS AT GROVE CITY COLLEGE

Grove City, Pa., May 10, 1905.

Struthers and Hannah, Pittsburgh, Architects, were in conference with the college authorities today. It was decided to go forward with the work on Cunningham Hall and leave nothing undone to have it ready for the Bible Conference, August the 3rd. This will be the second beautiful college hostel specifically provided for the entertainment of lady students during the college year. Both hostels will be open for the entertainment of out of town guests during August and the first half of September. The Colonial will be open to receive out of town guests during July and August and the first half of September. These are among the handsomest and most beautifully equipped college hostels in Pennsylvania and are located in a very desirable part of the college campus of forty acres. These buildings are lighted by electricity, heated with steam and have every modern convenience.

The college year, which closes on June the 21st, has been a very prosperous one. Over 600 different students have been in attendance during the year. The Senior class numbers 68. The outlook for the Summer session, beginning June the 27th, is unusually good. A wide scope of work in academic and collegiate studies is maintained every Summer for teachers and collegiate students, with departments of Music, Art, Commercial branches, Stenography and Typewriting, etc. The school of Pedagogy, which begins on the 5th of July and continues for six weeks, promises to be very largely attended. A large corps of specialists has been employed—teachers covering general methods for primary and intermediate grades, Drawing, Clay Modeling, Basketwork, Busy work for children, Normal methods of Music, applied Psychology, Reading, etc. Students can have instruction and in any grade of Latin, Greek, French, German, Spanish, Physics, Chemistry, Zoology, Geology, History, Literature, higher Mathematics, etc.

CONGRESSMEN FOR NINE-FOOT STAGE

Much Impressed With Insistent Demand of the People—Burton Declares for Project.

WHOLE VALLEY IS UNITED

SPECIAL TELEGRAM FROM AUSTIN BEACH, Staff Correspondent.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., May 11.—The Queen City on which the rivers and harbors committee of the national house is making an inspection of the Ohio river and the improvement already in progress, and learning of the need of a 9-foot stage reached here shortly after 6 o'clock this evening, having left Wheeling at midnight. A stop was made at Marietta, but a stop interfered with the program. The ladies of the party were taken in automobiles to the country residence of Congressman B. G. Dawes, where Mrs. Dawes entertained them. Chairman Burton and his fellow committeemen, together with the other men from the Queen City embarked on the Sonoma and were taken about 12 miles up the Muskingum river.

The insistent demand of each community for a 9-foot channel is convincing Chairman Burton and the members of the committee of its necessity.

The party, while here, were taken to Blennerhassett island, given a dinner at Hotel Chancellor and then followed an informal reception and speechmaking.

Rebukes Parkersburg People.

In his speech here Mr. Burton took occasion to rebuke the Parkersburg people for their effort last spring to secure an appropriation of $300,000 by a senate amendment for Lock No. 19, located just below Parkersburg, beyond where the Little Kanawha empties into the Ohio. He conveyed the clear understanding that his committee will be absolutely just and that there will be no discrimination. He strongly urged co-operation on the part of the people of the entire Ohio valley. He told them to get together, decide what work was most important and should be done at once, to make these decisions systematically and to rest assured that in case they handled the problem in this manner, the committee and congress would do its share in the great work of developing the Ohio valley.

When he returned to the Queen City, after inspecting Lock No. 18, now under construction below Marietta, this afternoon, Mr. Burton said: "If the Ohio is to be improved the nine-foot stage should be adopted, because the extra cost of the nine-foot stage over the six-foot stage would not be great in proportion to the total cost."

He then added that the improvement of the river on a nine-foot stage depended upon the policy to be adopted by the government in regard to internal improvements, and that he himself had originally contended for a survey of the river looking to a nine-foot stage in 1900, at the time the rivers and harbors bill was under consideration.

Mr. Alexander Is Impressed.

Mr. Alexander, the New York member of the committee, in speaking of the receptions and ovations marking the journey down the Ohio, said it was often really pathetic to note the earnestness of those who are advocating the nine-foot stage improvement. Said he:

"It is a great pity that the campaign for a nine-foot stage the entire length of the Ohio was not begun 50 years ago and carried forward in the same systematic manner it is being pushed now. Had that been done you would have today what you now urge us to provide. You ought to have a nine-foot stage. The question is merely how to bring it about. As has been said, educating the people of the country to appreciate the need and importance of the improvement is one thing necessary. Another is to do as much as can be done each year in a systematic manner."

Tomorrow's program includes stops at several important points and a reception at Portsmouth in the evening.

MUSIC WILL BE FEATURE.

Program for the Coming Convention of German Catholic Societies to Be on Elaborate Scale.

The music at the pontifical high mass to be presented by Bishop Canevin on Tuesday, May 23, to mark the opening of the convention of German Catholic societies, will be given by a mixed choir, under the direction of Prof. John C. Glomb and Prof. William Winter. The program will embrace "Ecce Sacerdos," by J. Lingenberger; "Introviters," "Allelina," a Gregorian chant for the offertory and communion; "Sacred Heart," with orchestra, by Ignace Mitterer; "Au Maria," arranged for baritone and alto, by G. Stehle, and "Primus pro Pontifical Pio," by J. Singerberger.

The mass meeting to be held at Carnegie hall, Allegheny, on the evening of that date, will be opened by the local president, Louis Seethaler. The first address will be made by Bishop Canevin. The Very Rev. Hugo Poff, O. S. B., Ph. D., of Wilmington, Del., will speak on "The German Catholic Family;" Peter Wallrath, editor of the Starbanner of Evansville, Ind., on "The Catholic as a Citizen," and Michael J. Given of Chicago on "Catholic Organization." The closing address will be made by the Very Rev. John Allen, C. S. Sp., grand spiritual adviser. Prof. Caspar G. Koch will preside at the organ, there will be a festival chorus of 125 voices directed by Prof. John S. Vogel, and Mrs. Agnes Vogel-Roberts will sing a solo.

The banquet, to close the convention, will be held in St. Mary's school hall. The toasts will be as follows: "Our Holy Father," the Rev. H. J. Gorbel; "Our Country," Herman L. Hegner; "Our Right Reverend Bishop," the Rev. Joseph Suehr; "Our Convention City—Allegheny," John R. Kunkel; "The German Song," the Rev. Alois Frety, South Bethlehem, Pa.; "True Brotherly Love," John Vorndran of Philadelphia; "Catholic Press," the Rev. J. B. Duffner; "Our Guest," Louis Seethaler; "The Pennsylvania State League," Joseph H. Reineman.

OHIO MAN GETS LETTER FROM GENERAL NOGI

Japanese Commander Thanks Him for Words of Sympathy and for the Gift of an American Flag.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS TO THE GAZETTE.]

COLUMBUS, O., May 11.—Gen. Nogi, Japanese hero of Port Arthur, has written a card to Col. W. H. Knauss of Columbus, in which he returns his thanks for the numerous kind expressions received from the American people, and in a particular manner expresses his appreciation of a small American flag sent to him by Col. Knauss.

After the fall of Port Arthur Col. Knauss sent a letter of congratulation to Gen. Nogi, complimenting him for his success upon the battlefield and hoping for his future success and for the ultimate triumph of the Japanese in the present struggle with Russia. Enclosed in the letter was a small silk American flag.

Tuesday Col. Knauss received a card from Gen. Nogi, written in Japanese, which he has succeeded in having translated by a Japanese. The card is signed by "Gen. Baron Nogi," and the warrior states that he "is more than pleased to receive the token (American flag), and it gives him great pleasure to thank the sender for it, and also for the kind words of encouragement and good cheer."

SAYS RUSSIANS WERE DRUNK AND IMMORAL

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

BERLIN, May 11.—Emperor William, addressing the higher officers after a review of troops at Strassburg today, said, according to the Strassburg-Buerger Zeitung:

"The Russian army which fought at Mukden has become enervated by immorality and drunkenness. Only in this way can its defeat at Mukden be explained. As Russia has shown weakness in the presence of the yellow danger, circumstances might arise which would place upon Germany the task of opposing this danger. Officers and men must spend their time well so they shall not fall into immorality and intemperance."

The emperor's speech at the swearing in of naval recruits at Wilhelmshaven on March 9, in which, according to the brief report published at the time, he cited the Japanese as a luminous example of patriotism and soldierly fidelity and of which the Evangelische Kirchen Zeitung May 8 published another version, as explained to the Berlin Neuste Nachrichten by a person present, was not intended to be made public. He added that it was indeed altogether confidential.

The officiating clergyman had spoken of the courage of the Japanese in such a way as to permit the recruits to infer that it made little difference in war whether the soldier is a Christian or a heathen. The emperor thereupon spontaneously undertook to correct this impression.

MR. CARNEGIE PRESIDES OVER THE STEEL INSTITUTE

H. J. White of Pittsburgh a Delegate Representing United States—Mr. Gayley to Read Paper.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS CABLE TO THE GAZETTE.]

LONDON, May 11.—The annual meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute opened here today, Andrew Carnegie presiding for the last time.

The United States was represented by C. T. Purdy and Dr. G. Revay of New York; J. B. Miles of Philadelphia, and H. J. White of Pittsburgh. Mr. Carnegie in his farewell speech said he appreciated the honor of being the first American president of the institute and introduced his successor, R. A. Hadfield, the vice president of the institute. Mr. Carnegie announced his subscription of $25,000 to the research fund as a parting gift to the institute. H. C. Boynton of Cambridge, Mass., was awarded the Carnegie scholarship of $300.

The meeting will be continued tomorrow. Among the more important papers to be read is one by James Gayley, formerly of Pittsburgh, but now of New York, on "The Application of the Dry Air Blast to the Manufacture of Iron."

Denies Report of Conspiracy.

The report from Washington, D. C., to the effect that Pittsburghers were trying to monopolize the oil business in the Osage Indian reservation in Indian territory, was denied yesterday by Theodore N. Barnsdall, president of the Indian Territory Illuminating Gas and Oil Company. He states that if there is any such conspiracy on foot, the Standard Oil Company is the guilty party.

WILD MAN ON A ROOF REFUSES TO BE RESCUED

Fire Department Is Called Out to Bring Demented Individual from His Dangerous Perch.

Sitting in the pouring rain on the edge of the roof of a vacant building at 313 Penn avenue and making a noise like a bullfight, a demented man yesterday afternoon threatened to jump 40 feet to the hard pavement. He refused to be rescued, and when the fire department was called out with ladders to bring him to the ground, he laughed at the shuddering multitude, leaped to a low kitchen and then into the mud. With a parting laugh he disappeared, running in the direction of Allegheny.

The stranger first attracted the attention of the tenants of the buildings on the eastern side of Penn avenue. He was sitting on the cornice with his feet dangling over the pavement. He was unmindful of the pouring rain and frightened women into hysterics by springing forward as if about to make a dive into the street. Threats, protestations and coaxing did not cause him to desist his hair-raising antics. Policeman John M. Neary went after the man, but it was feared that he would kill himself by falling to the pavement.

As a last resort Truck A was called and the fire wagon dashed down the street with clanging bells. The man heard his rescuers coming and ran to the rear of the building. Before the ladders could be raised he made his escape by leaping to the roof of a low building and thence to the ground.

Favors Norway's Demands.

CHRISTIANA, May 11.—The special committee appointed to report on the consular question has unanimously adopted and submitted to the Storthing the draft of a bill for the establishment of a separate consular service under the Norwegian government, as that country demanded. The bill is to go into effect on April 1, 1906.

PIRATES WIN IN ELEVENTH

Pittinger's "Spit" Ball Was Wild and Ritchey Brings in Run That Wins Game.

CLEVER PLAY BY THE PIRATES

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE GAZETTE.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—A wild pitch by Pittinger sent Ritchey across the plate with the winning run in the 11th inning of one of the most exciting games ever seen at the Broad and Huntington streets grounds. "Pitt's" wild throw was due to the "spit" ball, and lost the game to Pittsburgh 4 to 3.

A magnificent double play pulled off in the tenth inning by McBride, Clancy and Peitz snatched victory from Duffy's men. With one out and Doolin on second base Roy Thomas placed a pretty bunt alongside the left field foul line, 10 feet from the home plate. McBride ran up, scooped the ball and by an accurate throw to Clancy put out Thomas as he stepped on the bag. Meanwhile Doolin had rounded third base on the play and hurled himself at the home plate as Clancy turned and with a perfect throw to Peitz prevented Charley from scoring the run which would have ended the game. Doolin was so much annoyed at Umpire Klem's calling him out that he kicked strenuously and was put out of the game in the eleventh inning.

Fred Clarke's catch of McGee's fly, which ended the game, called for long applause. Clarke got the ball a few inches off the ground and completed a somersault in holding it. He also caught a fine drive off Thomas' bat in the eighth by good sprinting. Howard also distinguished himself by making four singles out of five times up.

Robertaille pitched in magnificent form during the first six innings. The Phillies only got the ball out of the diamond twice on hits during that time and Clancy had 13 of the put-outs. Sparks and McGee had made a single and two-base hit in the third and fourth inning, but had not been advanced.

Howard's two-bagger in the first inning was Pittsburgh's only hit during the first three innings. In the fourth, however, Dreyfuss' players solved Sparks' delivery and earned a run. Beaumont, the first man up, singled to center. Howard was safe at first on Sparks' failure to field his difficult bunt. Wagner fouled to McGee, Clancy hit for two bases to left field and Beaumont scored. Ritchey and McBride died on short flies to Titus and McGee. Clarke's men scored their second run in the sixth inning. Beaumont got three bases, as McGee misjudged his fly a short distance behind third. Howard scored him with a single to right, his third of the game. Howard was safe at second on Doolin's bad throw, and ran to third on Wagner's fly to Thomas. Clancy flied to Thomas and Ritchey was called out on strikes. McBride was left on third in the seventh as a result of a pass, Peitz's sacrifice and Robertaille's out.

The Phillies tied the score in the seventh. Courtney died on a grounder to Wagner. Robertaille gave McGee four wide ones. Then Titus hit the ball far over Beaumont's head for three bases and scored as Clarke fumbled the ball assisting Beaumont's throw home. Bransfield singled, but was out stealing.

Pittsburgh scored another run in the eighth. Beaumont was out, Gleason to Bransfield. Howard made his fourth straight single, ran to second on a passed ball by Doolin and continued to third on "Reddy's" wild throw trying to catch him at second. He scored on Clancy's two-bagger to rightfield. Peitz's wild throw of Gleason's bunt put the "Kid" on third base in the Phillies' half, but he was left there.

The Phillies tied the score again in the ninth. McGee was a victim of Wagner and Clancy. Titus hit for two bases to right field, and Bransfield sent him home with a single to left field. Manager Duffy sent Kruger to bat for Sparks and substituted Pitcher Pittinger for Sparks in the ninth inning. "Pitt" was wild, passing Peitz, but no damage came of it. In the tenth inning Clarke, the first man up, drew a base on balls. Fred was anxious to score and dashed for second base with two balls and no strikes called on Beaumont. Clarke was out, trying to steal second. A moment later Beaumont walked. He was safe at second base as Doolin dropped Peitz's throw. Pittinger and Bransfield retired Howard, Beaumont taking third. Wagner also walked and stole second, but Clancy flied to McGee.

The star double play spoiled the Phillies' chances in their half. Ritchey singled to left in the eleventh. McBride sacrificed him to second. Peitz fouled to Bransfield. Ritchey running to third base on the out. With two strikes on Robertaille, Pittinger threw the ball over Abbott's head and Ritchey scored. Robertaille was out, Gleason to Bransfield. The Phillies went out in order. The score:

The Truth about Whiskey.

Rye whiskey is made of rye grain moistened and heated until the starch in the grain is developed. Rye or barley malt is then added to the mash and a chemical change takes place, turning the starch into sugar. This last mixture is fermented by the use of yeast and the product, now technically known as the "beer," is sent through a still and then again through a second copper still, from which we get whiskey—a high-proof colorless liquid. This liquid at the distillery is put into oak barrels charred on the inside to open the pores of the wood, thus permitting the tannin in the oak to come more quickly in contact with the whiskey, and in the course of time becomes the beautiful amber colored fluid known as Rye Whiskey. This process seems simple. The secret is in the way it is done and in the quality of the material used.

Gibson's Pure Rye Whiskey is the standard for excellence in whiskey because in the Gibson's distillery

ONLY THE BEST RYE GRAIN IS USED.

ONLY THE BEST AND HIGHEST PRICED BARLEY MALT IS USED.

Only the best oak that can be bought is used for the barrels. The Gibson's methods have never been equalled.

All this has and does cost money, but it has made the reputation of Gibson's Pure Rye Whiskey; it has made the Gibson's distillery the largest producer of High Grade Rye Whiskey in the world.

"Blended" or "Straight" (bottled in Bond), it is never anything but Gibson's Pure Rye Whiskey.

USES SHERLOCK HOLMES' METHOD

Superior Court to Decide Whether Murdered Wife or Suicide Husband Died First.

CHAS. E. SPEER'S WILL FILED

The estate of a wife murdered by her husband, who afterwards committed suicide, is the subject matter of an interesting question as to who died first and the right of inheritance, raised on an appeal to the superior court. The strange history of this money is also involved in the story, making it an unusual contention, and one which required the deduction of a Sherlock Holmes to win in the lower court. It is a parallel case to that of the Fair estate, where the principals were both killed in an automobile race in France, the wife's relatives claiming millions because they alleged Mr. Fair died first.

Leonard Johnson married Emma V. Cozins February 6, 1901. They did not get along and separated March 1, 1903. In June of the same year Johnson made such threats that his wife sued him for assault and surety of the peace. He was in jail for a time, but the case was settled. She did not see him again until December 15, 1903, when he came to her aunt's house, where she was living, and fired four shots at her. Three of them took effect and she died. Johnson left the house, ran across a field, ran down and was later found dead. A bullet had been sent between his eyes, the revolver lay near his right hand and an empty two-ounce vial marked "laudanum," near his left hand.

Mrs. Johnson had inherited some money from her grandfather and $500 of it was in the hands of her guardian. Her nearest kin were her two half brothers, who claimed the money. Johnson's next of kin was his mother, Mrs. Sarah Eastlick. She claimed the money on the ground that as Johnson had no children, the husband inherited the wife's estate and she inherited from him, figuring that he died last. The Lawrence county court decided in her favor and the half brothers appealed.

Used Deduction Theory.

The appellants base their contention on two points. They claim that Johnson died before his wife, as Mrs. Johnson was shot at 11:30 a. m. and died at 12 o'clock. Johnson ran directly from the house across a field, his tracks being easily followed in the snow, but the body was not discovered until 3 p. m. The appellants hold that the condition of the snow-covered ground shows that he sat down, shot himself and died at once, the snow not being disturbed as it would have been had he walked about or had his pain been prolonged for some time before death came. They figure that he must have died not later than 11:30, or half an hour before his wife expired. The other point pressed was the principle that a man who deserts his wife is not entitled to benefit from her estate.

The appellee claims that Johnson did not desert his wife wilfully, although disagreements are admitted, and asserts that the wife died immediately upon being shot.

This money has had a strange history. Mrs. Johnson was an orphan. After the death of her grandfather, Jacob Cozins, who was a farmer in Jefferson township, Mercer county, some of her uncles and aunts raised the hearthstone of his house and found several thousand dollars there. They divided it among themselves, ignoring the girl's claims. Later W. H. Codhran, a Mercer county lawyer, took up the girl's case, and after a vigorous fight secured $1,000 for her. The $500 at issue now is part of this money. In any case it will not go to a decedent of Jacob Cozins, as neither Mrs. Eastlick or the half brothers of Mrs. Johnson are of his blood.

The court will not meet again until Monday, when the list from Crawford, Erie, Forest, Warren and Venango counties will be taken up.

Speer Left Brief Will.

The will of the late Charles E. Speer, who died May 2, has been filed. The will is brief and leaves his entire estate, the value of which is not given, to his wife, Sarah Dawson Speer, in case she did not survive him it was to go to their five children, Mary Clarke Speer, Ettie Speer Painter, J. L. Dawson Speer, Louise Dawson Speer and Charles Edward Speer, jr., or to such of them as should survive. The will was dated February 12, 1900, and a codicil was drawn on December 30, 1904. The codicil provides that in case his wife dies first he devises his interest in the tract of land known as Friendship Hill, consisting of 550 acres in Fayette county, to his daughter, Mary Clarke Speer, in trust, and directing that each of the children shall have the use of and occupy the place as a summer home as had been the custom, until such a time as a majority of the five children should unite in writing a request to a trustee to sell the property, when it is to be sold and proceeds divided. The decedent requests that each child shall contribute his share toward the maintenance of the summer home. Mrs. Speer is made executrix without bond.

Bertha Scholten, late of Smith's Station, leaves her entire estate to her husband, Adolph Scholten, providing he has been discharged from bankruptcy. She leaves $10 each to her three sons, Joseph, Hugh and John, and $200 each to her son Frank and daughter Pauline. She provides that in case her husband was not discharged from bankruptcy the estate be left to her son Joseph, in trust for her husband, to be turned over to him after his discharge. In case her husband died before her, she directed that the estate was to go to Frank and Pauline.

Account in Grier Estate.

The first account of the estate of the late Samuel C. Grier has been filed for audit by the Union Trust Company. The total as shown by inventories amounts to $556,141 13, with a balance for distribution of $228,588 01. The balance is made up in part of $6,039 25 cash and the following shares of stock: 42 shares Pittsburgh and Allegheny Bridge Company, $1,800; 668 shares Youngstown Park and Falls railway, $34,580; 500 shares Rodgers Sand Company, $27,500; 75 shares Goettman Company, $5,625; 115 shares Mercantile Trust Company, $13,225; 50 shares National Union Insurance Company, $6,000; 50 shares Ingersoll Pleasure and Amusement Company, $3,750; 155 shares Pittsburgh-Honduras Company, $1,492 50; 38 $1,000 first mortgage bonds of Columbia Plate Glass Company, $39,400; 43 $500 second mortgage of the Pittsburgh stock exchange, $5,000; 4 1-5 shares Pittsburgh Steam Coal Company, $38,690; three shares same $24,000; oil leases, $2,008 25.

The first and final account of the estate of George W. Stevenson shows the estate as inventoried at $37,788 17, with debts existing against the business of $24,749 42, leaving a balance for distribution of $13,145 28.

H. M. Scott and C. E. Bown, lately doing business as Scott and Bown, attorneys, filed suits against the Pittsburgh & Allegheny Valley Railways Company and the Meyersdale & Salisbury Street Railway Company. The former suit is an action to recover $10,003.48 for professional services rendered in incorporating the company, which is capitalized at $1,500,000, to build a line from Pittsburgh to New Kensington, and in securing options, etc. The suit against the latter company is for $2,668.98 for similar services.

Criminal Court Sentences.

In criminal court John Brooks was acquitted of a charge of larceny. John Gordon was found guilty of a charge of false pretense. Kitty Nelson pleaded guilty to shoplifting in a downtown department store and went to the workhouse for 90 days. Jack Glenn and E. T. Mailley went to the workhouse for four months for stealing electrical apparatus. Charles Magee got six months for stealing a motor. E. G. Bowen, for impersonating an officer, will serve 15 days in the same institution. John Mansky, for larceny, got six months, and Charles Bernarding went to Huntingdon reformatory for forgery.

Quick raises were: Edward Jones, burglary, six months, workhouse; John Plisky, entering a building, eight months, workhouse; John Wodenranz, felonious cutting, three years, penitentiary; John Jasper, entering a building, two years, workhouse; Leggett Smith, larceny, seven months, workhouse; Mattie Edwards, larceny, five months, workhouse.

Orders were made by Judges Shafer and Kennedy, who sat in license court, permitting the three dealers granted licenses with a 10-day penalty attached, to take out their certificates, the period of suspension being over. The dealers are: Retail, John Monahan, 1619 Beaver avenue, Allegheny; Henry C. Lubbe, 37 Fourth avenue, Carnegie. Wholesale, George Englert, 1701 Carson street.

Judge R. W. Archbald of Scranton, sitting in United States district court, confirmed absolute the sale of real estate in the case of Charles M. Reed of Erie, who is going through bankruptcy proceedings. The property is located in Buffalo and is known as Wharfage. It was sold to the Erie & Western Transfer Company, the sale price being $132,000. Of this sum $26,888 80 goes to the creditors.

A true bill for murder was returned against Mrs. Annie Novokovic, the Hungarian woman who hacked her husband to death with a hatchet at their home on Smallman street early in April. Other true bills were: Burglary, Harry Taylor; felonious assault, Harris Baker, Smith Miller, Philip Seibert, James Stang; larceny, George Johnston, Joseph Schmidt, John McLaughlin, John Seiler, William Ward, Peter Kushon, Jassie Simpson, Margaret Snipe; larceny from the person, Helen Walls; entering a mill, Thomas Thompson, Harry Bryan; assault and battery, E. S. Bowen, James Turner, William Langes, John Richard, Anderson Dowling, Walter Knox; embezzlement, E. Mead Wippo (3); selling liquor without a license, Bridget Smith, Sarah Woods.

Executions issued: Duquesne National bank vs. Fisher Bros., $1,549 58; John D. Watson vs. Antonio Arena, Ciro Tomacelli and Giacome Incardone, $293; Morris L. Hoffman, Harry C. Hoffman and Ira W. Hoffman vs. H. J. Harris, $1,780 80; Thomas C. Jenkins vs. Charles Lutz, $498.

Hearing in Armstrong Case.

Judge Kennedy in common pleas court No. 3 refused to dismiss the demurrer to the motion to quash the writ of quo warranto proceedings against Councilman Richard Armstrong of Allegheny. This means that a hearing will be held, but the date has not been fixed.

JAPANESE MIGHT ALSO HAVE USED HER PORTS

France So Declares in Semi-Official Statement Regarding Neutrality Imbroglio.

[Associated Press Cable to The Gazette.]

PARIS, May 11.—A semi-official statement from high sources was published today giving France's position in reply to Japan's charges of breaches of neutrality. One of the headings is:

"Japan has done in the Philippines and Dutch East Indies the same as she accuses France of doing in Indo-China."

The conclusions are set forth as being:

"First—The French neutrality regulations were not established for the present war, but existed previously without protest from Japan.

"Second—France has exercised her sovereignty to fulfil the regulations not only to the full letter, but has also adopted special measures to maintain absolute impartiality.

"Third—The only direct purchases of coal by the Russians were at Algiers where the quantity was insignificant. The main stock of coal was purchased in Germany and England without protest.

"Fourth—Any advantage which the Russian second Pacific squadron obtained by anchoring off the French coast were equally open to the Japanese if they had taken the offensive instead of awaiting the Russians."

HARD FIGHT SAVES TOWN.

Burning Oil Tanks Are Punctured With Cannon Shots at Downs, West Virginia.

WHEELING, W. VA., May 11.—(Special.)—Heroic efforts on the part of the oil men and citizens of Downs, W. Va., prevented the destruction of the town in the oil fire early this morning. While a special train from Morgantown was conveying a cannon to the scene of the fire, scores of persons were building trenches around the two burning tanks. When the cannon arrived, holes were shot in the sides of the tanks, through which the oil poured out into the trenches. The loss is estimated at $25,000. Frank Leach, the operator, whose light started the conflagration, will recover from his injuries.

The tanks belonged to the South Penn Oil Company and the Eureka Pipe Line Company. A pumphouse was also burned.

EXPLOSION BURNS BOY.

Maddened by Pain He Escapes Rescuers and Eludes Police.

After being seriously burned on the face and head and over the entire upper portion of his body in a gasoline explosion, an unknown Italian boy escaped from three women as they were taking him to the office of Dr. W. H. Kerr, 2417 Carson street, yesterday morning. Several people attempted to capture the suffering boy, but he evaded all and ran into the yards of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad and disappeared among the freight cars. Although the police searched for the boy in order to see what he got proper medical attention, they have been unable to locate him.

HARPER IS GETTING WELL.

President of Chicago University Shows Beneficial Effects of Treatment With Radium.

NEW YORK, May 11.—(Special.)—Looking remarkably well and showing plainly his continued improvement in health, Dr. William R. Harper of Chicago university is again in this city for treatment with radium—the "liquid sunshine."

"I have not read what Dr. Harvey King of Flower hospital said about the fluoroscope method being 'liquid moonshine,'" said Dr. Harper, "but so far as my case is concerned, it seems to be beneficial. Look at me and judge for yourself. I am gaining in weight steadily and I feel stronger and better in every way than I did a month ago. I am here to continue the treatment, and may stay for a week or more. I have no engagements of a business or social nature. My health is my first consideration now, and I shall devote most of my time to its restoration."

HUMP WAVERS BEING SECURED

Director Bigelow Is Preparing to Have Another Vote Upon This Proposition.

ELECTION AFTER JULY 12

Director E. M. Bigelow is preparing to make another campaign for a bond issue to pay for the removal of the hump. For the present he will confine himself to an attempt to secure waivers from property holders in the hump district. This work is now in progress.

The question of issuing bonds for this purpose was voted upon July 12 of last year. The project was defeated and cannot again be voted upon until a year has elapsed. The director is of the opinion that it may be possible to have the necessary ordinance passed authorizing the new election for a date soon after July 12. He will consult City Solicitor Rodgers about the legality of this procedure and if there is any question about it, nothing will be done of an official nature until after July 12.

Assistant Controller E. S. Morrow advises that nothing be done until after July 12. "The eastern bond buyers," said he, "are much given to raising technical questions. If the hump ordinances are put through prior to July 12, we might have trouble disposing of the bonds."

While Mr. Morrow was discussing the frequency with which eastern bond buyers raise technical questions, a messenger boy handed him a telegram. It was from a New York bond house that is preparing to bid on the filtration issue. It is not just satisfied with the wording of the clause pertaining to the rate of interest in the ordinance authorizing the issue for the water plant.

Common council will meet tonight. Just what business is to be brought up has not been announced by the leaders. The finance committee will convene prior to the meeting to pass upon an ordinance transferring funds from some other appropriation to pay for the entertainment of the rivers and harbors committee of congress. The sum will not exceed $3,000.

MURDER IS SUSPECTED.

Coroner's Investigation Into the Death Daniel Jones Leads to Arrest of Three Men.

Following the coroner's investigation into the death of Daniel Jones, which occurred at his home, 4002 Plummer street, yesterday afternoon, Richard Thompson of 5163 Kent alley was arrested by the Lawrenceville police on a charge of murder, and P. W. Glover and P. H. Knorr were arrested as witnesses.

On Saturday last Jones and the men under arrest are alleged to have spent the afternoon drinking, during which Jones and Thompson are said to have quarreled. During the fracas Thompson is alleged to have struck Jones in the mouth and between the eyes. Jones staggered and fell, breaking his left leg.

He was given medical attention and sent home and his condition was not considered critical. He denied having been engaged in a fight and attributed his injuries to a fall. Following his death yesterday afternoon Deputy Coroner George J. Shadd made an investigation, which resulted in the arrests.

The coroner was notified last night that three men were killed on railroads yesterday. George Haigle, aged 38, of Green Oak, a miner, was killed on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie; John Farko, aged 66, of 98 Forward avenue, was killed at Marion junction on the Baltimore & Ohio, and an unknown man was killed on the Wabash at Bridgeville.

William Felck, watchman at the Salvation Army armory, 35 Diamond street, reported to the police yesterday afternoon the finding of the body of William Armstrong in a bed in one of the rooms of the lodging house. He had no known address.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—It is reported here that Mr. Hengelmueller, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, who is now on leave of absence, is seeking a transfer to a European post.

CHICAGO STRUCK BY TIDAL WAVE

CYCLONIC CONDITIONS RIFE

[Special Telegram to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—Chicago harbor was struck by a four-foot tidal wave shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. The same conditions were felt all along the west shore and in Kenosha, Wis., and other places, including Racine. Farther up the lake, Waukegan was damaged to dockage. The Chicago river current at its mouth is normal at three-quarters of a mile, but during the fury of the tidal wave it increased to fully 20 miles, according to the captain of the life-saving crew.

Houses struck by lightning, basements flooded, trees and shrubs blown or destroyed, hailstones as large as hen's eggs, that broke thousands of dollars worth of glass; paralysis of street car traffic, flooded streets and conduits, and hundreds terrorized by blinding flashes of lightning and crashing thunder, are other features of the terrific storms that have been sweeping over Chicago and the southwest in the 12 hours.

The damage throughout northern Illinois is incalculable. Houses have been blown down, barns demolished and growing crops ruined. Adding to the terror of Chicagoans comes a statement from Prof. Cox of the United States weather bureau, that conditions are ripe for a recurrence of the tornado that swept St. Louis in 1896.

During today's storm in Chicago the current flowed up the river in a mighty roll, and basements in South Water street and docking along the river front suffered heavily. In Kenosha harbor the wave carried away everything on the docks, piers and harbor inlet.

HON. FRANK P. RAY DEAD.

MEADVILLE, PA., May 11.—(Special.)—Hon. Frank P. Ray, member of the legislature from this district, died this morning after suffering for months from erysipelas, which had necessitated amputation of one leg. Mr. Ray was born near Quincey, Ill., in 1858. He came to this county when a boy and began teaching school here when 17 years of age. Later he entered Allegheny college and was graduated from that institution. He served in the Civil war under Gen. Patterson, and in 1885 he began practicing law in Meadville, where he had lived ever since. He was city solicitor for several years, and in 1889 served as district attorney by appointment. He was attorney for the Erie railroad in this county.

Mr. Ray was elected to the assembly on the Republican ticket in 1902, and was re-elected in 1904. He was a Mason, an Elk and a member of the Phi Gamma Delta Greek letter fraternity. He was an active worker in the Methodist Episcopal church. He leaves two daughters, the Misses Anna and Mollie Ray, one son, Robert Ray, and a sister, Miss Sarah Ray.

NATIONAL SANITARIUM FOR CONSUMPTIVES

ST. LOUIS, May 11.—The board of managers of the National Fraternal sanitarium, at a meeting here decided upon Las Vegas, N. M., as the place for the location of a national sanitarium for the cure of consumption. The sanitarium, which will be situated six miles from Las Vegas, and known as "Fraternal City," will be opened October 1, next. It was announced that over $1,000,000 in land, buildings and cash has been donated for the purpose.

U. S. Official Sues Detective.

BUDAPEST, May 11.—Special.—United States Immigration Commissioner Marcus Brauen has begun proceedings against a detective, whom he charges with annoyance in watching his movements and with tampering with his mail. The police deny Mr. Brauen's charges, and are circulating statements reflecting on his record in Munich and New York.

Williamsport	4 2 0 0 2 0 2 0 1—11	7	2

YORK, May 11.—Johnstown outplayed York in all departments. Good kept the hits scattered, while those of Matthews were punished with errors of the wildness of the pitcher. Miller and Bailey contributed sensational fielding plays. The score:

Johnstown	2	2	2	1	0	0	1	0	1	—	9

HOMESTEAD'S VICTORY.

Scores Winning Runs in Sixth Inning While Rain Is Falling.

The game at Homestead yesterday between H. L. A. C. and Canton ended in the first half of the sixth inning on account of rain with Homestead at bat. Up until the end of the fifth inning neither team had scored. Just before the game was called, however, Lindsay secured a hit and was followed by Mathay, who scored both himself and Lindsay with a home run. Some of the prettiest fielding seen at Steel Works park this summer was noticed in the game in spite of the fact that a greater part of the five innings was played in a drizzling rain. Canton will play again at Homestead this afternoon. Score.

Rain Saves McKeesport Team.

Rain probably saved McKeesport from a drubbing at the hands of the Braddock baseball team yesterday. The visitors were finding Lefty Smith and in the three innings he was touched up for five safeties, including a two-bagger. A heavy downpour stopped the game in the third as McKeesport was going to bat with the score 3 to 1 in Braddock's favor. A feature play was Soffel's double. Manager Harry Crawford is still looking for good timber and will sign some new players before the week is out. Braddock will play at McKeesport today.

Will Hold Annual Show.

FRANKLIN, PA., May 11.—(Special.)—The Franklin Kennel club will give a bench show Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 1, 2 and 3. Entries close Saturday, May 20, with I. G. Miller, secretary. F. G. McIntosh, Franklin, will judge Pomeranians, and C. H. Mason, New York, all other breeds. The entrance fee is $1. Ribbons will be given and prize winners. There is a long list of special cups and prizes.

A Short Inning Game.

SALISBURY, PA., May 11.—(Special.)—Kiski shut out the East Liberty leaguers this afternoon 2 to 0, in a game that was stopped by rain at the end of the sixth inning. Donaldson's work for the visitors was excellent, and he had eight strikeouts to his credit. Score:

SCANDRETT IS INDICTED.

Grand Jury Finds True Bills Against Him, Captain Wilson and an Allegheny Policeman.

True bills were returned by the grand jury yesterday afternoon against Director Thomas B. Scandrett of the Allegheny department of public safety, Capt. James Wilson, Lieutenant John F. Boland and Frederick Trautvetter.

The indictment against Director Scandrett charges him with taking $100 from John Regan as protection for a gambling house at 51 Darragh street. Three indictments were found against Capt. Wilson, charging him with taking $100 from Dora Freihman for the privilege of selling clothing to inmates of disorderly houses, with taking $50 from Frances Foley, keeper of an alleged resort at 50 West Robinson street, and $50 from Daisy Hess, keeper of an alleged disorderly house at 64 West Robinson street. Roland and Trautvetter are accused of taking money from Daisy Hopkins, of an alleged disorderly house on Robinson street.

The following bills were ignored: Ned Redman, a police official, charged with extortion; Charles Graber, a wagon driver for Frederick Tr[illegible], charged with misdemeanor; Capt. Wilson, charged with extortion; [illegible] Carroll, policeman, charged with [illegible]ion, and Robert Dickson, a [illegible] charged with a misdemeanor. SOCIETY

MISS GLADYS LONSDALE PAINTER, Mr. and Mrs. Park Painter's youngest daughter, is to be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Eugene Gray Watson and John Eastman Woodruff, which is scheduled for Thursday evening, May 25. It will take place in the Hotel Hartman, Columbus, O., at 8 o'clock, the Rev. B. McElroy, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Episcopal church, officiating. Miss Painter expects to leave Allegheny for Columbus on May 22, and will be a house guest of Miss Watson over the wedding. The bridegroom is the son of Timothy Woodruff, former lieutenant governor of New York, who was married a short time ago. Miss Watson acted as maid of honor at the wedding. The ushers at the approaching wedding, who are all millionaires, include George Mohlman and Estevan Morrison of New York, Thomas Jefferson of Louisville, Ky.; Francis Johnson of Racine, Wis., and A. Conro Fiero of Chicago. Arthur Havemeyer of New York will serve as best man. Mrs. John L. Wagner of Columbus, a sister of the bride, will be her matron of honor, and in addition to Miss Painter, the bridesmaids will include Mrs. J. Robert Coffin of New York city, Mrs. Lyman Bournice of Milwaukee, and Miss Mary Telford of Columbus. Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Woodruff and the younger couple will spend their honeymoon abroad together.

Lieut. Clark Takes Bride.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 11.—(Special.)—Miss Sara Jane Hall and Lieut. Charles A. Clark, U. S. A., were married at the home of the bride's parents here today. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Cooper of New Wilmington, Pa., an uncle of the bride. There were no attendants except four ribbon bearers. The ring ceremony was used, the father giving away the bride. Guests were present from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and other cities. After a wedding tour in the west and in Canada, Lieut and Mrs. Clark will be at home in Ft. Worden, Wash., where the groom is stationed. The bride is the daughter of ex-Mayor John W. Hall.

Fogal-Dean.

MARS, May 11.—(Special.)—Miss Alice Fogal and Mr. William Dean of Pittsburgh were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fogal at Wexford, Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. I. Wilson, pastor of the Grose Roads Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Dean will be at home to their friends after May 16, at their new home in McKee place, Allegheny.

Pugh-Scott.

BEAVER FALLS, May 11.—(Special.)—Miss Edith C. Pugh and Herron S. Scott of Allegheny were married here today at noon at the home of the bride's uncle, D. R. Whitla. The Rev. C. F. Swift, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, performed the ceremony. The couple were unattended. They left on an eastern trip and will be at home after June 1 in Arch street, Allegheny.

Mrs. Trainer's Luncheon.

At her home in Northumberland avenue, Mrs. William Booth Trainer was hostess at a luncheon of eight covers yesterday in honor of Mrs. Park Painter, who is visiting her sisters in Allegheny. The guests included Mrs. Painter, Mrs. Willis m J. Holland, Mrs. Louis W. Dalzell, Mrs. Herman D. Denny, Mrs. James Park, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., and Mrs. Harry Darlington.

Robb-Frohne.

Post nuptial announcement has been made of the marriage of Mrs. Josephine Tanner Robb, formerly of this city, and Augustus Eugene Frohne of Fargo, the marriage having taken place at noon yesterday in Detroit, Minn. The Rev. James Munson, rector of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church, Detroit, officiated.

Second Engagement in Lee Family.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Hamor of New Kensington have formally announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edna Hamor, and Alfred M. Lee of Oakmont, the engagement to be followed by an early June wedding at the bride's home. The Rev. Dr. Laurens McLure, rector of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church of Oakmont will solemnize the marriage. The engagement is the second to be announced in the Lee family within the month, the first being that of Miss Anna Lee and the Rev. Burgess Eyer Holter of Ozone, Tenn., whose marriage is scheduled for Tuesday of next week. Both Miss Hamor's fiance and her father are prominent Pittsburgh attorneys.

Smith-Jackson.

Charles E. Jackson, who has been connected with the Academy of Music orchestra under John Hoffman for the past 15 years, surprised his friends yesterday by announcing his marriage to Miss Elizabeth R. Smith of Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Jackson is formerly of Mt. Vernon, O.

May Party at Concordia Club.

The annual May party, closing the social season, took place at the Concordia club yesterday afternoon and evening. The children were the guests in the afternoon and the club members and their wives in the evening. Harry Bing was chairman of the committee in charge.

Jones-Sherrill Engagement.

Mrs. Charles T. Ingham of Wilkinsburg gave a luncheon yesterday at which she announced the engagement of Miss Mary Elizabeth Jones of Allegheny and Dr. Alvin W. Sherrill of the Markleton sanitarium. The engagement will terminate in an early June wedding.

Among the Clubs.

Hold Last Reception Together.

The last reception which the managers of the United Presbyterian Orphans' Home and the Memorial Home will give together was conducted yesterday afternoon and evening in the two institutions in Jefferson and Monterey streets, Allegheny. It is expected that the new Columbia hospital in Wilkinsburg will be completed in August or September and the annual reception and donation at the hospital and the Orphans' home will be held separately hereafter. The two buildings were crowded last evening, while through the afternoon there were a great many visitors. Supper was served from 5 o'clock until 8 and in the evening a musical program was presented. A great many donations were received by both boards of managers, whose officers, with the officers and members of the board of directors of the United Presbyterian Women's association, which controls the institutions, composed the receiving party.

Adopts Italy as Subject for Study.

The Woman's club of New Brighton held its annual meeting on Wednesday afternoon. The club has had a very successful year, with interesting programs for its meetings. The program committee reported Italy as the subject for study next season. The election of officers resulted in the following: President, Miss Annie Rigby; first vice president, Mrs. F. W. Walker; second vice president, Mrs. W. S. Morrison, recording secretary, Miss Elizabeth Wilde; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harrison Witherow; treasurer, Mrs. F. S. Reeder. The entertainment comittee for next year consists of Mrs. James Moorhead, Mrs. Charles Ramsey, Mrs. C. C. Moss, Mrs. W. J. Dithridge and Mrs. Horatio Wilde. The club has decided to hold its annual picnic on Tuesday, June 6, at the home of Mrs. Ernest Meyer.

Violin Kindergarten Work.

The first demonstration of the Von Kunits violin kindergarten work attracted a number of people to Hamilton hall yesterday afternoon, where the children, pupils of Mrs. von Kunits, showed their skill in acquiring musical principles. The adaptation of the kindergarten method to instruction in music has passed the purely experimental stage in some cities, and the demonstration given yesterday showed the success of the work in Pittsburgh. The program was presented by Agiala von Kunits, Frederica Napier, Nausicaa von Kunits, Norman Gordon Napier, Drusilla Daily, John Liggett, Della Elizabeth Liggett, Dorothy Napier, Grant Peacock and Dorothy Gittings, and included solos and class work. Edward Napier was the accompanist.

Musical Club Gives Fine Concert.

A smart audience greeted the members of the Tuesday Musical club last evening at the annual benefit concert for charity. The ballroom of the Schenley was well filled and the program presented was an enjoyable one. The Elizabeth A. Bradley Children's Home was the beneficiary. The program was given by Miss Lucy P. Hine, Miss Florence Murdock, Mrs. Emma Porter Markinson, Mrs. C. M. Clarke, Miss Genevieve Wheat, Mrs. Myron R. Stowell, Miss Helen Steinert, Mrs. James Stephen Martin, Mrs. Lawrence Litchfield, Madame Kate C. Lippa, Miss Evelyn Lippa, J. Howard White and the choral club, which sang with Miss Katherine Ellis, Miss C. M. Duffin and Mrs. Elizabeth McNally as its soloists.

Held Last Meeting but One.

The Thursday Afternoon club met yesterday at the home of Miss Genevieve Haffon in Mifflin avenue, Mrs. Harry Brostus entertaining with Miss Haffon. It was the last meeting but one of the season and the program was confined to China. Mrs. George Chamberlain read a paper on "The Imperial Family of China," which was followed by a talk on "The Music of China," given by Miss Bess Goldie. Miss Cora Tennant discussed current events. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Chamberlain in Westmoreland avenue, Swissvale.

Notes of the Clubs.

A play, "The Return of the Spinsters from Oklahoma," was given last evening in the parish house of St. Peter's Episcopal church, Fifth and Craft avenues, Oakland, under the auspices of the Sisterhood. The proceeds of the evening will be given to the managers of the Lawrenceville public bath and wash house.

The members of the Ambulance circle of the East End hospital gave a benefit euchre yesterday afternoon in Braun's auditorium, South Highland avenue, to raise funds to purchase an ambulance. The officers of the circle include Miss Kate McCormick, president; Miss Bessie Heyl, vice president; Miss Mary A. Hackett, secretary, and Mother Josephine, treasurer.

The Ladies' Aid society of St. Francis hospital will hold the donation day reception next Wednesday, May 17, from 3 o'clock until 10, in the hospital, Forty-fourth street, Lawrenceville.

The closing exercises of L'Apres Midi Francaise were held yesterday afternoon at the home of Madame Raymond Gros. A feature of the afternoon was recitations in French by a number of children, among them, Elizabeth Herron, Ethel Litchfield, Lorna Williams, William Gibson, Paul Williams, Jean Gros and Lawrence Litchfield.

"IL TROVATORE" SUNG BY ENGLISH COMPANY

Verdi's Fine Old Opera Is Given Good Production at the Nixon.

In melodic richness and sweetness there are few operas that excel "Il Trovatore." Whatever may be one's musical taste, there are times when a revival of this old opera is welcomed as a joyful feast of melody, and there are very many music lovers who regard it as an unapproachable classic. It was sung last night by the Savage grand opera company in a thoroughly satisfactory way. In precision, volume and melody the flowing churchly choruses of the opera were perhaps never heard to better advantage. In the early scenes the principals showed some lack of vocal spirit and earnestness, but this passed away and by the time the famous prison scenes were reached the singers were able to arouse the most enthusiastic ovation. Mr. Sheehan's Maurice is familiar to most opera goers, and despite the arduous use the singer made of his voice the night before there were moments in Trovatore when his splendid lyric tenor rose to fine heights. Miss Ivell was the Azucena of the cast, and her peculiar contralto added a new charm to the role. The long and trying recitative and solo scene of the gypsy camp was sung with admirable vocal beauty and given intense operatic fervor both by Mr. Sheehan and Miss Ivell. As the gypsy hag the singer is enabled to conceal or mainly very many of the acting anachronisms that characterize her Carmen, though she still displays certain angularities of gesture and movement that proclaim her crudeness as an actress. On the whole, however, her Azucena is a strong, virile piece of work, vivid in its vocalism and impressive in its dramatic interpretation. With Verdi's rhythmic and sugary music the singers all display a common defect in the use of the tremolo voice. The result is some unevenness where one looks for unbroken melody. Mr. Goff sang the Count with distinction, and his rendering of "Tempest in the Heart" brought him a salvo of applause. Miss Brooks as Leonora secured even a greater ovation in the prison music and in the familiar Miserere, which was given with melodic fullness. Of course the anvil chorus and "Back to My Mountain Home" each received in their place a cordial welcome. In the latter song the fine tonal quality of Miss Ivell's voice was revealed as nowhere else in the opera. The production from a scenic standpoint is thoroughly good, and the large audience enjoyed to the full music that after all appeals primarily to the innate love of melody, rather than to any intellectual culture of prejudice. Tonight "Tannhauser" will be sung, the overture commencing at 8 o'clock sharp.

Hackett in Two Plays.

The advance sale of seats for Mr. James K. Hackett's engagement at the Nixon theater next week began yesterday, and from the interest manifested it would appear that the popular star will play this year to larger audiences than ever before. During the first half of the week he will present "The Fortunes of the King" in which he has been successful through the present season, and on the last three nights of his engagement he will present for the first time upon any stage a play entitled "The House of Silence."

After Corporations' Taxes.

TRENTON, N. J., May 11.—(Special.)—Attorney General McCarter has instituted legal proceedings against 400 Jersey corporations and is soon to take similar action against 2,500 other concerns in his annual effort to collect delinquent taxes.

THE DELINEATOR

"The Most Necessary of All Magazines Published for Women"

The June Issue contains 182 pages, 78 devoted to Fashions and 104 to Home and General Features—182 pages in all

This reproduction cannot present the beautiful coloring of the June front cover. It is one of George Gibbs' American Girls.

Get the June Issue—Out To-Day

IN THIS ISSUE is presented as a fitting companion feature to Mrs. Berkeley-Loyd's "Fashions in New York" no less an authority than Edouard La Fontaine, who will furnish us with the text and illustrations each month for our Paris Letter.

M. La Fontaine is without peer on the European continent as a dress critic and a writer on all topics pertaining to fashions. Besides this, he is an artist of great individuality, as is shown by his sketches which are reproduced in his Paris Letter. They have a style and an atmosphere about them distinctly Parisian. Known personally to all the famous dress creators in the various fashion centres of Europe, he has free access to their establishments and "private views" of their latest productions long before they are seen in public. Under the arrangement just concluded, M. La Fontaine will contribute to THE DELINEATOR exclusively in America.

ANNA BURNHAM WESTERMANN, whose charming drawings have appeared for some time in THE DELINEATOR, illustrating the styles described in the "Fashions in New York," is well known as a creator of figures of living grace, which, without lessening in any way their value as fashion drawings, lifts them far beyond the plane of the usual fashion plate. Mrs. Westermann's women are sweet and womanly and, better than all for your purpose, they know how to wear their dresses. They are always well groomed, and their appearance each month in THE DELINEATOR will surely be welcomed by all of its readers. Hereafter Mrs. Westermann's fashion drawings will appear only in THE DELINEATOR.

BEAUTIFUL FASHION ILLUSTRATIONS IN COLORS

ROMANCES OF SUMMER RESORTS," by Weymer Jay Mills, begins in this number. No series of tales published for some time promises so much of general interest as these charmingly reminiscent tales. Their delightful telling and the quaint old pictures which accompany them assure enjoyment to every reader.

A TRAVEL SKETCH that is brimful of interest is F. Berkeley Smith's description of "A CORNER IN NORMANDY." It is interesting as a story and gives you more than a passing glance at one of the most curious nooks in the old world.

THE third installment of Albert Bigelow Paine's "THE LUCKY-PIECE," and another of the "SON RILEY RABBIT" tales by Grace MacGowan Cooke, together with the many regular departments, make this issue a remarkable one. "THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF A WEDDING," in the Home Department, discusses fully the problem of bringing the wedding festivities within a reasonable expenditure.

MANY PROMINENT PEOPLE ARE HURT

Men of Mark in Pittsburgh's Industrial Concerns Among the Wounded.

WOMEN ARE ALSO SUFFERERS

Among the Pittsburghers hurt in the wreck were men and women prominent in industrial, commercial, financial and social circles.

Alvin P. Shumaker, general agent of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company of Pittsburgh and of the Royal Motor Car Company of Cleveland, with offices at 603 Park building, was slightly hurt in the wreck. Mr. Shumaker and his wife were returning from the east, where Mr. Shumaker had been on business. A telegram was received from him at his office yesterday, stating he was not badly hurt, and that Mrs. Shumaker had escaped injury. Mr. Shumaker lives at 823 North Highland avenue, East End.

Henry P. Bope, first vice president of the Carnegie Steel Company, escaped from a sleeping car, after receiving slight injuries. He was returning to Pittsburgh after a business visit to the company's offices in New York. Mr. Bope's home is at 327 North Negley avenue, East End, where a telegram was received yesterday, stating that Mr. Bope escaped with cuts and bruises. He is stopping at a private residence in Harrisburg, and does not expect to return to Pittsburgh for a few days.

Arthur C. Cope, who was employed as a clerk at the Hotel Henry till January 1 of this year, is also reported to have been injured in the wreck. He was well known in Pittsburgh, and it is thought he was coming back to Pittsburg to seek employment.

Telephoned to His Family.

W. H. Van Tine, who conducts an interior decorating business at 908 Penn avenue, and whose home is at 522 Ivy street, Shadyside, was on his way home when the train was wrecked. He was taken to the Harrisburg hospital. His family was notified of his injury by long-distance telephone yesterday.

John W. Anderson, president of the Carbon Steel Company, of Thirty-second and Smallman streets, and his son, Frank W. Anderson, also connected with the company, were seriously hurt in the wreck. Dr. L. H. Willard, the family physician; Mrs. Anderson, her daughter-in-law and Wilson Anderson went to Harrisburg early yesterday. The family resides at 411 Neville street, Bellefield.

Mrs. William Huselton, wife of Dr. Huselton, and her daughter, Miss Roma, of Wirth and Morewood avenues, East End, were slightly injured in the wreck. Dr. Huselton went to Harrisburg yesterday on the limited. They are expected to return home today.

Harmon Has Been Unfortunate.

E. L. Harmon, who had his arm broken in the wreck, besides sustaining other injuries, is manager of the Pittsburgh office of Wood, Harmon & Co., 301 Smithfield street, probably the largest real estate operators in the world. Mr. Harmon, who lives at Crafton, has been particularly unfortunate during the past year. A few months ago he slipped on the ice and broke his right wrist. He had just recovered from this accident, which had laid him up for several weeks. Mr. Harmon has many friends in Pittsburgh and especially in the Chartiers valley. He is a member of the First Christian church, Crafton, and one of its main supporters. The Rev. Walter J. Rounds, his pastor, and his many friends were anxious last evening to learn the extent of his injuries, and many inquiries were made at the newspaper offices and at his home.

M. O. Coggins, president of the M. O. Coggins Company, commission merchants of 923 Liberty avenue and 42 Eighteenth street, sent a telegram to his family at their home, California avenue, Avalon, yesterday, that he was only slightly hurt and expected to return home last night. He was taken to the Harrisburg hospital after the wreck.

Telegraphed for More Clothes.

Miss Alma and Miss Eleanora Gregg of Lincoln avenue, Allegheny, were slightly hurt in the wreck and lost all their clothing. Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Beymer of 5501 Baum street, East End, sister and brother-in-law of the Misses Gregg, went to Harrisburg last evening, after a telegram was received requesting that clothes be sent. The Misses Gregg were returning home from Atlantic City. They are expected to reach home today.

George W. Miller, president of the Willard Miller & Sons Construction Company, arrived at his home, 402 South Rebecca street, Shadyside, last night. Mr. Miller is suffering from cuts about the head.

Charles Donnelly, the former coke manufacturer, telephoned to his home, Fifth avenue, East End, that he is suffering from severe cuts and bruises. Dr. Lawrence Litchfield went to Harrisburg yesterday to look after Mr. Donnelly's injuries. No arrangements have been made for Mr. Donnelly's return home. Mrs. Donnelly was notified of the wreck by Congressman M. E. Olmstead by long distance telephone.

George L. Peabody, chairman of the Peabody & Filbert Co., Ltd., paving contractors, reached home about noon yesterday. He suffered from shock and bruises and last night said he had a frightful experience in the wreck.

Had to Be Stitched Up.

James A. Dawes, of 124 Bigham street, Mt. Washington, traffic manager for the Pittsburgh Steel Company, received a severe cut on the right hip, which had to be closed with stitches at the Harrisburg hospital. Mrs. Dawes and her father, John D. Williams of Stanwix street, Mt. Washington, went to Harrisburg yesterday.

H. Prescott Simpson of 117 Lincoln avenue, Edgewood, president of the Simpson Stove and Range Company, was slightly hurt in the wreck.

Mrs. Albert J. Barr and her daughters, Constance and Adelaine, were on the train, but were not badly hurt. A. J. Barr, president of the Pittsburgh Post Publishing Company, who was in New York, left for Harrisburg on receiving word of the wreck. Mrs. Barr's home is in Bidwell street, Shadyside.

J. J. Brainard, son of Ira Brainard, a live stock broker at Herrs Island, was slightly injured in the wreck and lost all his clothes. He telephoned to his father at 3 a. m., yesterday of the accident.

Senator's Daughter in the Wreck.

Attorney and Mrs. James R. Tindle of Sewickley were badly cut and bruised and lost all their clothing in the wreck. Mr. Tindle yesterday morning sent word to his residence for clothes for himself and wife, and a trunk full was sent to Harrisburg on the first train. Mrs. Tindle is a daughter of United States Senator P. C. Knox of Pittsburgh.

Librarian George H. Lamb of the Braddock Carnegie library narrowly missed being a passenger on the train. He had been in New York securing books for the library, and intended returning home on the train that was wrecked, but took one earlier when he learned the train did not stop at Braddock. He arrived home yesterday morning.

Sigmund Stemm of Washington avenue, Braddock, was among the passengers on the wrecked train, but escaped injury. Mr. Stemm was in New York on business, and, as was his custom, started on train No. 18. He wired relatives at Braddock yesterday that he was safe.

Unusual Activity in Consolidated Arizona Mining Company.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Considerable activity was demonstrated in today's trading in Arizona Consolidated Mining Company stock, which had but little reaction in sympathy with the recent slump of the general market, but fully recovered strong on today's trading, it having made a remarkable advance, due, as it is understood, to big buying of insiders. There seems to be a general impression that certain strong interests are trying to absorb the stock, due to the report that the company's recent development work has shown enormous increase in values of ore bodies, which are being worked at the mines at certain depths.

FIREMAN THOUGHT WORLD HAD BLOWN TO PIECES

Describes His Feelings While Flying Through Space After Dynamite Exploded.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

HARRISBURG, May 11.—What the engine driver, Thomas, felt as he looked ahead no one will ever know, for he is dead, but Dickey, the fireman, who was flung to safety by one of those freaks peculiar to high explosives, tried to interpret his sensations at that awful moment.

"I was on the left side of the engine," he said, "and I, as well as Thomas, saw the buckling of the freight cars, but we were going 60 miles an hour and nothing on earth could have stopped us. We clenched our teeth, closed our eyes, and just hoped to God that we would get out by that toppling freight. The engine, tender, baggage car, smoker and the regular passenger car did get past, but then it came. The freight came down on the first six Pullmans; we went crashing into the last car of the freight—we didn't know what was in it—and all hell split.

"I can still feel a sensation of being lifted in the air and going up higher and higher. I wasn't conscious of any pain. All I could feel was the wind cutting my face and things flying before my eyes like a great flock of birds. Then I found myself in a sandbank, away over on the other side of the gully. It was a long time before I knew what had happened and it was not till then that I could remember that there had been a roar as if the very insides of the earth had blown up. Then I pulled myself together and crawled back. I don't want to think of what I saw then."

And he put his hand before his eyes as if the sight was there again.

QUICK BRAKING CHIEF CAUSE OF THE TRAGEDY

Sudden Application of Air to the Freight Train Wrecked a Car Next to One Containing Dynamite.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Charles M. Sheaffer, superintendent of passenger transportation of the Pennsylvania railroad, stated today that the wreck was due to the sudden stopping of an eastbound freight train. The Steelton shifter was on the east-bound track and flagged the freight, which was following. The sudden application of the air on the freight train wrecked the thirty-fifth car from the engine and threw it over on the west-bound passenger track just as the Cleveland and Cincinnati express was approaching or passing that point.

When the passenger train was brought to a standstill on behalf of it had passed the wrecked freight car. In the thirty-sixth car was a cargo of dynamite consigned to Karbaugh & Co., contractors at Columbia, Pa. When the passenger train stopped the dynamite car of the freight train was opposite the third sleeping car of the express.

"It appears," Mr. Sheaffer said, "that there were one or two slight explosions previous to the big explosion. These were probably caused by the express train running over several sticks of dynamite which had fallen to the track from the car. The thirty-fifth car was sideswiped by the express and it is supposed the dynamite car was broken in the collision."

RECALL ELKINS' BILL ON DYNAMITE TRAFFIC

Senate Committee Discusses Harrisburg Disaster—International Railway Congress Expresses Sympathy.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Members of the senate committee on interstate commerce today informally discussed the railroad disaster at Harrisburg, and it was recalled that Senator Elkins of West Virginia, the chairman of the committee, introduced a bill in February, 1904, prescribing conditions under which high explosives could be carried. Opposition developed because of the effect of the measure upon cartridges and ammunition. This bill provided many safeguards, among them being regulations which would prevent cars containing explosives from stopping in large towns.

Senator Elkins introduced the bill as a result of his spending a night at Grafton, W. Va., in a sleeper which was alongside a car loaded with dynamite. The bill required that cars loaded with explosives be so labelled, and vested the supervision of the subject in the interstate commerce commission.

The International railway congress today unanimously adopted resolutions expressing sympathy to the injured, the families of the deceased, the railroad company and the employes involved in the railway accident at Harrisburg. The resolutions were offered by Sir George Armitage of England and adopted by the congress by rising vote.

SENATOR KNOX SPENDS HOURS IN SUSPENSE

Waited Long to Hear from Harrisburg of the Fate of His Wife, Daughter and Son-in-Law.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, May 11. Senator P. C. Knox spent several hours in suspense this morning after hearing of the Harrisburg accident, for he believed that not only Mr. and Mrs. Tindle were in the train, but that Mrs. Knox was with them. The Tindles had spent yesterday with her in Philadelphia, and the three had intended to go together to Valley Forge on the ill-fated train.

Senator Knox received a telegram at the Waldorf-Astoria soon after 4 o'clock this morning informing him of the wreck, but giving no news as to the possible fate of his daughter, wife and son-in-law.

He called up by telephone a newspaper office and asked for any information. The paper at that moment had its special correspondent in Harrisburg on the telephone and was able almost immediately to give to the senator reassuring news. For some reason Mrs. Knox had decided to postpone the trip to Valley Forge until today, but her daughter and son-in-law decided to go on as originally planned. It thus happened that they were on the fated train.

WIFE HEARS SAD NEWS.

Comes to Wilmerding to Effect Reconciliation With Husband and Learns of His Death.

A pretty woman, about 25 years old, stepped from an eastbound train of the Pennsylvania railroad at Wilmerding yesterday morning and asked Baggagemaster H. I. Duer if John S. Knapp still lived at Wilmerding. When told that Knapp's funeral had been held last Friday she swooned. She revived later and left the town.

It is said the woman was the wife of Knapp, a Pennsylvania railroad brakeman at Pitcairn, who was found dead from heart trouble at his home in Wilmerding last week. It is said there had been domestic trouble and that the wife had gone to friends in Huntingdon county. She had not heard of Knapp's death, and had come, it is understood, to effect a reconciliation.

BROWNING IS SHAKEN UP.

Men Cry at Scene. They Witness at Wreck in Hardsburg.

V. E. Browning of Cleveland came in on one of the sections of train No. 110, which arrived during the excitement incident to the arrival of President Roosevelt. Mr. Browning had been shaken up, and said that while he felt pretty sore, he believed he was not seriously hurt. He walked with some difficulty. He went on to his home in Cleveland.

Mr. Browning said he was thrown into the aisle of his sleeping car by the shock. He crawled out through a window and aided in the work of rescue. He heard men imploring to be released from the wreckage, which pinned them down, and men who tried to pull the maimed out of the burning debris, and had to give up the effort, cried at the scenes they witnessed.

CLEVELAND MAN SAVES HIMSELF AND OTHERS

Tells Graphic Story of His Experience in Wreck, as Do Others.

A dramatic story of the wreck at Harrisburg was told by David Kurtz of Cleveland, who had been in New York and was on his way home, at the Union station last night. Mr. Kurtz, who is about 35 years old, was unable to get a berth in the Cleveland sleeper and had secured a lower berth in the Cincinnati Pullman. He was awakened by the sound of a terrific explosion.

"A few seconds after I awoke," said Mr. Kurtz, "a man staggered in the aisle and fell across my berth. A moment later there was another explosion. I was lying crosswise in the berth, with my legs hanging out, and as the second report came the upper berth fell down. It did not come all the way down, and as I tried to draw my legs up from the aisle I felt that somebody in the aisle was pressed against them. I pulled my legs into the berth and then gathered up the bedclothes from under my own body and that of the man who was lying beside me and pushed them out of the window. That gave me freer movement. I helped my involuntary companion to turn around, and when he got his legs out of the window I, from the inside, assisted him to descend. I could see that he was terribly injured.

"Then I reached under the edge of the upper berth, which came within a foot of my berth and helped the man who was lying in the aisle into the berth. Him also I lowered down and then I got out myself. All this time the wreck of the freight train was burning furiously, lighting up the interior of my berth.

"The second man whom I had assisted was not badly hurt and went about his business. The first one, who had fallen across my berth, was badly hurt. His face was covered with blood and he walked with difficulty, leaning heavily on my arm. I looked around and saw that our only way out was to crawl under the freight cars that had not yet begun to buck. My companion dragged himself under the cars and I followed. When we stood up he staggered and fell. I led him away from the freight cars, for there were still some explosions and pieces of wreckage were flying about. By that time somebody had brought blankets. I secured one, after laying the man down, and then covered him up.

"All this time, you must remember, I was in a remnant of a pair of pajamas, for they had caught fire as I climbed out of the window, and the second man I had helped put out the fire. If we had remained three minutes longer in the car we would have been burned to death.

"Before turning away to attend to my own needs I asked the man whom I had covered with a blanket if I could be of any further use to him. He said not reply, and then I bent over and asked him his name. There was no answer and I left him, convinced that he was dead.

"Who he was I do not know. His face was such a mass of cuts and blood that I cannot tell now whether he was smooth-faced or had a mustache, but it did seem to me that he had a square, firm face. He was a man about 40 years old, I judge, and weighed about 155 pounds. I understand that the place where I laid him was on the lawn of the Cameron house. I am curious to know whether he was really dead or had only fainted."

Mr. Kurtz was badly shaken up, his back was burned, he explained, and he wore colored glasses because of pains in his eyes.

George Dimling, the Diamond square saloonkeeper, also arrived home last night, accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mr. Dimling limped and he was visibly moved when he told of the accident.

"We had sat up late," said Mr. Dimling, "I had not undressed completely, and was lying in my berth, with my trousers and shoes still on. Mrs. Dimling and my daughter had gone to the ladies' room to prepare for bed. The train stopped suddenly and there was an explosion. It seemed to me that a portion of the roof of the car was blown off, for I could see the sky through the hole. The men shouted and the women in the car screamed. How my wife and daughter and I got together again I don't know, but at any rate we got out of the car at the platform. All the women in the car and most of the men were in their night clothes. We had to buy new outfits in Harrisburg. My wife lost some jewelry, and I some money. Altogether, I judge, our loss amounted to $500."

LOSES VALUABLE PAPERS.

Memphis Wreck Victim Returns to Car for Valise and Is Forced by Explosions to Retreat.

F. W. Brode of Memphis, Tenn., was the sole wreck victim who reached the city on the southwest limited last night. He occupied a state room and was wearing bandages on his left foot and head. His foot was badly crushed and his head burned. He is a cotton merchant and was returning from New York on business. He gave his experience in the accident as follows:

"I was occupying a lower berth. When the collision occurred I was thrown out of my berth by the car turning over. After the car stoped rolling I got out of a window. Immediately an explosion occurred, throwing debris all over me. This did not hurt me very much, and I started to reenter the car for my vest, which contained my watch, valued at $500. While reaching for the vest another explosion occurred, burning my face. This pained me terribly and I started from the wreck. It flashed into my mind that my valise was in the seat in which were papers, etc., worth about $10,000. I started back to get the valise when a third explosion occurred and I sustained burns about the head. I made no further attempt to get my property and it was consumed in the fire. I expect to get duplicates of many of the papers burned, but it will be some time before I can prove that the originals were destroyed."

VICE PRESIDENT CASEBY IS EXPECTED TO DIE

A private message was received yesterday saying that H. F. Casehy was lying at a Harrisburg hospital and was not expected to live. He was on his way to Pittsburgh to attend a meeting of the district of superintendents of the National Fireproofing Company, to be held here. Mr. Casehy lives in New York. He is vice president of the National Fireproofing Company and manager of the plant on New Jersey, near New York.

OVER ONE HUNDRED DEAD IN OKLAHOMA TORNADO

More Than 141 Are Seriously Injured, 20 Per Cent of Whom Will Die.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

GUTHRIE, OKLA., May 11.—The death list of last night's tornado at Snyder will probably exceed 100 persons. Eighty-five bodies have been recovered, a dozen persons are missing and given up for dead, 41 are seriously injured, and more than 100 other persons suffered less severe injuries. A physician says 20 per cent of the injured will die.

Relief is going from neighboring towns. Oklahoma City today sent 100 men, to dig graves and seek the dead still in the ruins, and a dozen undertakers with 100 coffins. Offers of financial assistance have come from numerous cities. Gov. Ferguson of Oklahoma has issued a proclamation calling attention to the needs of the stricken town.

It is still difficult to obtain information. To add to the general confusion, and distress after the tornado passed, fire broke out and burned all that remained of the buildings in one of the business blocks. It is possible some bodies were cremated.

Harrowing features marked the storm. An unidentified woman was picked up dead, having been pinioned to the ground by a long sliver which entered her left eye and came out through the back of her head. Clarence Donovan, a railroad engineer, and Miss Nina Fessenden were to have been married last night, but had just postponed the nuptials until this evening. Both were instantly killed by the storm. Fred Caump, a boy, had started to a cellar when a flying timber decapitated him.

One of the saddest cases was that of Col. Williamson. When the storm struck, Williamson grabbed a woman whom he thought was his wife and hurried away to a place of safety. When out of danger he discovered that the woman was not his wife. Later Mrs. Williamson was brought to the temporary morgue with her head completely severed from the body.

Three young children in the Crook family were killed, one, a babe, was snatched from its mother's arms and its brains dashed out against a brick wall.

Nearly every building in town was either demolished or damaged, besides those which were burned. Debris was carried northeast as far as Cooperton, 12 miles, and it is reported that there are more fragments in that town than in Snyder.

The mayor of Snyder is having much trouble arranging for the burial of the dead, owing to the fact that there are a number of unidentified bodies at the morgues. There is much suffering due to lack of provisions and places to stay.

At least one other town in Oklahoma, Quinlan, in Woodward county, was struck by the tornado and Mrs. O. W. Cox and her two sons were killed.

TOPEKA, KAN., May 11.—A tornado struck Overbrook today and passing through a thickly settled farming country wrecked several houses and barns and unroofed others. So far as known, no one was killed. One person is reported injured. The same storm struck Lawrence, causing $10,000 damage, but no one was hurt.

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS RUSH TO SCENE OF WRECK

Trains to Harrisburg Are Crowded With Anxious People, and Then Sad Home-Coming Starts.

Every train over the Pennsylvania from Pittsburgh to Harrisburg was crowded yesterday with relatives and friends of the victims in the accident.

Word has reached here by telegraph, telephone and through the newspapers of the calamity, and scarcely a name was mentioned in the Pittsburgh list that did not quickly send several local people to the scene.

The saddest trips were those made by the relatives of the Pittsburghers who were overtaken by death. The first accounts did not do justice to the situation generally and there was hope that the victims would recover.

It was under this hope that the relatives of Mr. Phillips, Mr. Crabbe and Mr. Bright left Pittsburgh yesterday morning, but death had come before the relatives could reach Harrisburg.

There started yesterday afternoon, and will continue today, a sad procession back to this city. The remains of the dead and the injured who can be moved are being brought here as rapidly as possible.

It was stated in the case of Mr. Phillips that the relatives had found it necessary to hold the funeral with all speed. The services will take place today.

WILL ARRIVE THIS MORNING.

Remains of Victor L. Crabbe Will Come in Special Car.

The special car bearing the remains of Victor L. Crabbe, Robert Pitcairn's son-in-law, is expected to reach Pittsburgh on train 9 of the Pennsylvania railroad at 7:15 a. m. today.

With the car will come several members of his family, who hurried to Harrisburg at the first news of the accident which had befallen him. Mr. Pitcairn is one of the number.

Killed by Lightning at Circus.

MARIETTA, O., May 11.—William Tullius of Lowell was killed by lightning which struck a sideshow tent of a circus today. James Lacey, Mrs. W. H. McFarland, Myrtle Gossett and a farmer were injured. Several hundred other persons were slightly shocked.

Verdict in Mine Disaster.

WILKESBARRE, May 11.—The coroner's inquest into the Conynham mine disaster was finished today and a verdict was returned declaring the accident due to the breaking of the cage rope, and that the company had the rope inspected by incompetent men.

FEARED DEATH AT HANDS OF UNION

Striker So Testifies at the Hearing Before Federal Master in Chancery.

MAYOR REBUFFS COMMITTEE

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—The teamsters' strike today was quieter. Driving storms of wind and rain drove pickets from their posts. There was little disturbance in the business quarter. On the outskirts, there were a few attacks on drivers of delivery wagons, but nobody was injured.

The most important phase of the strike today, was the examination of witnesses before Master in Chancery Sherman, who is taking testimony relative to the alleged violation of the federal injunction granted in favor of the Employers' association and of the seven express companies.

Adolph Pfeil, for 11 years an employe of the United States Express Company, but now a striker, refused to answer questions on the ground he might incriminate himself. The queries put to him by the attorney for the Employers' association covered the grounds of the cause of the strike and whether the officers of his union had advised or ordered him to strike.

Edward Buckley, a striking union driver, told of being ordered by officials of his union to put his wagon in the barn. When asked why he did not continue at work, he replied:

"Because I did not want to be killed."

"Why did you stand in fear of death if you went out?" he was asked.

Buckley hesitated and then said:

"Because there are riots on the streets and I would not sacrifice my life for a job."

A committee representing various labor unions received a rebuff at the hands of Mayor Dunne this afternoon. The committee waited on the city's chief executive with a request that an order permitting policemen to ride on the wagons of the firms against which the teamsters are on strike be countermanded, on the ground that the police were being used in a manner to discriminate against the strikers. The mayor told the committee he had issued the order enabling the police to ride on the wagons; that he would be personally responsible for the effect of that order.

Edward Jasper, who was struck on the head with a stone during a riot on May 6, died at the county hospital today.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Five business agents of labor unions today were declared guilty by Judge Chyrarus of forming a conspiracy to drive John M. Stiles, a contractor and painter, out of business. In the same decision, officers and members of six labor unions, defendants in the case, are restrained from interfering with Stiles or his business in any way.

In his opinion, Judge Chyrarus declared: "Lawless unionizing cannot be permitted, and these men are shown to be without love or respect for law, and without regard for the legal rights of others."

"MAE WOOD? SHE'S HAD ADVERTISING ENOUGH"

President's Secretary, William Loeb, Jr., Says That Affair Is Closed Incident.

"Mae Woods? Oh, it isn't necessary to discuss that incident," remarked President Roosevelt's private secretary, William Loeb, Jr., after a moment's thought, when asked regarding the suit brought against him by Senator Platt's alleged former acquaintance.

Dr. Lambert, the president's physician, and Edward Pinchot, members of the party who were standing on the platform when the question was asked, had a hearty laugh at the expense of Mr. Loeb.

"The Mae Woods affair is a closed incident," continued Mr. Loeb, "and there is no further necessity for discussing it. You newspapermen have advertised that woman too much already."

The president's secretary was then asked if the summons had been served upon him, which Mae Woods announced she would thrust upon him at Omaha.

"I haven't seen it yet," replied Mr. Loeb with a smile, and he turned about and re-entered the car.

Life a Burden

There are times when life seems a burden—when you are tired, worn-out, have dull pains in the head and a continual feeling of uneasiness. You have no appetite, and your digestion is poor; your sleep broken, and you get no rest.

Little annoyances seem great mountains of trouble, and you are blue, melancholy and given over to gloomy forebodings.

This means low vitality—exhausted brain nerves.

For this condition Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a specific; it is a food for the nerves. It builds up the nervous system, and restores lost energy.

Try it to-day and see if your sleep is not sound and refreshing, and the morrow brighter and more hopeful.

"I am glad to announce that I have recovered my health, as far as my advanced age will permit, as I am 73 years old. My case was very bad; my nerves were all shattered. I suffered much pain and coldness; was so weak and felt so sad and lonely and heart-broken. When I commenced taking Dr. Miles' Remedies I was completely prostrated. I have taken the Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, and they cured me." MRS. E. C. BAWLEY, Waterloo, Ind.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

HER WEAKNESS GONE

HOT FLASHES AND SINKING SPELLS CONQUERED AT LAST.

Mrs. Murphy Tells Her Fellow-Sufferers How She Got Rid of Serious Troubles by Simple Home Treatment.

"I had been bothered for several years," said Mrs. Murphy, "by stomach disorder, and finally I became very weak and nervous. Flashes of heat would pass over me, and I would feel as if I was sinking down. At such times I could not do any housework, but would have to lie down, and afterward I would have very trying nervous spells."

"Didn't you have a doctor?" she was asked.

"Yes, I consulted several doctors, but my health did not improve under their care. One day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I told her that I had read about them in the papers, but that I did not know whether they were worth spending any money on. She assured me that they were an honest remedy, and that they had certainly proved of the greatest benefit in the case of her daughter. So at last, she praised them so enthusiastically that my husband got me a box.

"And what was the result?

"Before I had taken half of the first box my condition was greatly improved. The quickness with which they reached and relieved all my troubles was really surprising. They fully justified all my friend had said in their praise. After I had used only three boxes I had no more heat flashes or weak spells. Thanks to them, I have become a well woman, and I now heartily recommend them to all other sufferers."

Mrs. Mary D. Murphy lives at No. 1906 Force street, Fort Wayne, Indiana. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the remedy which she found so satisfactory, have tonic properties that are absolutely unsurpassed. They furnish directly to the blood the elements that give vigor to every tissue of the body and promote healthy growth. They strengthen the stomach at once and insure its cooperation. They can be depended on to revive failing strength, and to banish nervousness.

As soon as there is drag or dizziness, or pallor, or poor circulation, or disordered digestion, or restlessness, or pains, or irregularities of any kind these famous pills should be used. They are expressly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, and in this way they give strength to every nerve and muscle and organ of the body. They have cured the most obstinate cases of anaemia, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous prostration and even partial paralysis.

If you desire information specially suited to your own case write directly to the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Every woman should have a copy of Dr. Williams' "Plain Talks to Women," which will be mailed free to any address on request. Any druggist can supply the pills.

PITTSBURGH COAL PREFERRED MADE A SIX POINT JUMP

A Boom Followed the Listing of the Stock on the New York Exchange—The General Market Closed Strong, Pacifics Leading.

By JOHN O. BAGLIN, Financial Editor.

The feature of the New York stock market yesterday of greatest interest locally was the boom which occurred in Pittsburgh Coal, following the listing of the stock on the New York exchange. The largest dealings and the greatest advance was in the preferred issues, which opened higher at 73½, advanced to 76, and then became quiet for a time. Late in the session it became active and quickly jumped to 79½, closing at 78. The movement from 76 to 79½, back to 77½ and up to 78½ again was very rapid.

During the greater part of the session the general market was extremely dull and listless, the sales for the first two hours amounting to only 251,000 shares, the smallest total for any corresponding period in months. Traders were bearish and the early break of 2 per cent in Metropolitan Street Railway and 1½ per cent in Brooklyn Rapid Transit intensified the feeling. Metropolitan Securities broke 2 per cent and Consolidated Gas sold off 2 per cent. The depression was based upon intimations from Washington that the decision of the United States supreme court, which is expected on Monday, would be unfavorable to the public utility companies in the franchise tax suit. There was also some selling of United States Steel issues on the theory that the small increase in furnace stocks of pig iron during the month of April, showing that production had overtaken consumption, marked the top of the boom in the iron market. London was also a moderate seller of American securities, and altogether the tone of the market was depressed.

About the middle of the afternoon a radical change took place in sentiment. Under the leadership of the Pacific and northwestern railroad stocks the whole market became strong, dealings increased and prices advanced all along the line. The movement began with an advance in Northern Pacific, which finally reached 5½ per cent, the stock selling at 192. This was quickly followed by a similar advance in Northern Securities in the curb market, and then by Great Northern preferred, which on small transactions advanced 1¼ per cent. Finally Union Pacific, which had declined to 118½, advanced sharply, reaching 122⅞, and closing at the top. Southern Pacific advanced from 61 to 62¾ and closed at the highest. This stock was heavily bought by traders who often execute orders for the Harriman interests and there was immediately a revival of rumors of the declaration of an initial dividend. It was stated that this company has expended $50,000,000 in improvements during the past four years, the bulk of the money coming from earnings, and that stockholders are now entitled to receive dividends. It was also recalled that at the inception of the bull movement last fall, in which Southern Pacific took a prominent part, a story was circulated which was never denied that assurances had been given that if it became necessary to support the market over the presidential campaign a dividend would be declared on Southern Pacific, but that the management preferred to defer such action until this year. Of course the declaration of a dividend on Southern Pacific would benefit Union Pacific, which controls the road.

The effect of this change of sentiment was very noticeable on the rest of the list. With the exception of Consolidated Gas, all the early losses were recovered in both the railroad and industrial departments, and the market closed firm at the highest prices of the day. Call loans remained easy, the final quotation being 2 per cent.

On the local stock exchange the effect of the boom in Pittsburgh Coal in New York was very noticeable. Transactions in Pittsburgh Coal common reached 3,350 shares, at prices ranging from 18¼ to 19¾, the final sale being at a net gain of 1 per cent. The preferred on sales of 4,511 shares advanced from 73 to 78 and closed at the best, a net gain of 5⅝ per cent. The bulk of the selling here represented taking of profits, and the bulk of the buying was by houses with private wire connections with the eastern market, who were apparently conducting a profitable scalping operation. River Coal common sold to the extent of 740 shares at the uniform price of 10 and that price was bid for more. American Sewer Pipe rallied a dollar to 37½. Independent Brewing preferred had evidently discounted the dividend action, for the stock closed a fraction lower at 41½. Pittsburgh Brewing preferred was strong, advancing to 48 sales and bid. Crucible Steel issues were dull and nominally unchanged at 11⅛ for the common and 62¾@63 for the preferred. Westinghouse Electric rallied to 86½. Colonial Trust sold at 395, a decline of 5 points from the last previous sale.

FEATURES OF THE DAY

IN PITTSBURGH.

A boom follows the listing of Pittsburgh Coal on the New York exchange.

The common stock advanced to 19¾ and the preferred to 78.

In New York, Pittsburgh Coal preferred sold up to 79½, closing at 78.

IN WALL STREET.

The stock market opened dull and lower, but closed active and higher.

Sales included 625,000 shares stock and $2,215,000 bonds.

Industrials less active, but closed firm at moderate net gains.

Tractions and Consolidated Gas were the weak features.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

For the first time since the reaction in the stock market three weeks ago Wall street took some interest in rumors and reports of possible dividend action yesterday, and these reports were effective in the market. The attempt of the bear party to create uneasiness over the reiteration by the president that he is still strongly in favor of government regulation of railroad rates, and his attempt to depress industrial stocks because for the first time in nine months the production of pig iron has caught up with consumption, met with only indifferent success. There is undoubtedly a large short interest in the market, and the persistent buying of Southern Pacific, which was followed by renewed activity in Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Northern Securities and other northwestern stocks, changed the entire aspect of the market late yesterday afternoon, and final prices were the best of the day. The prospects of a winter wheat yield 100,000,000 bushels larger than last year, and somewhat larger than the largest ever harvested, is a genuine bull factor on the business situation, and this is fortified by the fact that consumption of iron and steel is at the present time larger than ever before in the history of the country.

The considerable movement which developed late in the day in the stocks connected with the Northern Securities settlement or associated with that settlement in speculative purchases, reduced the market from a run of dullness and neglect that threatened to exceed Wednesday's record. This movement served also to reassert the influence of the group of stocks on speculative opinion in general. Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were the leaders of this group on the circulation of assertions that the policy of their administration was shaping toward the inauguration of dividends on Southern Pacific. The buying induced by these assertions was quite substantial in comparison with the semi-stagnation of the general market. The movement laid the foundation for the change of those two stocks in the later strength of the more immediate Northern Securities group, in which Northern Securities itself shared on the curb. Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred moved upwards with great ease, which is attributable to the very small supply of these stocks in the open market. The fact of this scanty supply leaves the wide movements in the stocks open to suspicion of manipulation, which is easily managed in the case of closely-held stock of that class. No new capital out to realize, but it resulted naturally in re-awakening all the rumors pointing to an adjustment of threatened dispute over the Northern Pacific control.

Some traders expressed the opinion after the close of the market yesterday that the six-point rise in Pittsburgh Coal preferred within five hours was a pace too rapid to hold, but there was nevertheless very general satisfaction expressed over the course of the market. If the price of the preferred stock could be maintained around 80 for a time, there is little doubt that it would have a reassuring effect upon sentiment and ultimately lead to investment buying.

Commenting upon the rise in Pittsburgh Coal stocks following the listing on the New York exchange yesterday a local broker remarked: "The movement may have been a little rapid, and there may be some reactions, but there is after all, some logic in the advance. I mean from a purely speculative standpoint. Under the most favorable conditions it costs from 4 to 6 per cent to carry stocks in Pittsburgh, while in New York the cost ranges from say 3 to 4 per cent. Pittsburgh Coal can be used as collateral in a mixed loan on which the New York broker will pay from 2½ to 3 per cent, so that any pool interested in bulling the stock could handle the operation more economically in New York than in Pittsburgh.

Gross earnings of Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh for the first week in May increased $2,393.

Directors of the Shelby Iron Company have declared a dividend of 5 per cent, payable June 1, to stockholders of record May 25.

Adams Express Company directors have declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent and 2 per cent extra, payable June 1.

The Fidelity Title and Trust Company has declared the usual quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, payable to stock of record May 11.

The American Express Company has declared the usual semi-annual dividend of $3 and an extra dividend of $1.

According to an Ottawa dispatch, for the 10 months ending April 30, the sum of $941,007 was paid out in bounties on iron and steel, on lead $407,105, on crude petroleum $243,148, and on binder twine $9,107. For the same period of 1904 the iron and steel bounties amounted to $619,322, so that the payments for the present year show an increase of $321,685.

The Wall street trading element sold at the opening and were aggressive sellers all through the first hour of many stocks. Metropolitan Street Railway was depressed because of a newspaper statement to the effect that there had been a leak in the supreme court and that it was known a decision in the franchise tax case had been written, but not handed down, and that it made a distinct ruling upholding the franchise tax. One of the largest traders on the floor of the exchange at the same time made a drive at Steel stock, breaking the price below 30 and the preferred was forced down to 97⅞. In spite of the published statement that every one knew of the franchise tax decision, it is a fact that the decision expected from the supreme court has hardly been spoken of in Wall street circles for some time.

In New York money was extremely easy and it is believed that this is partly due to the progress of remittances from interior national banks in preparation for payment on Monday through their New York correspondents on the return of government deposits under the call of the secretary of the treasury.

The receipts of the Pittsburgh, McKeesport & Condellsville Railway for the year ended December 31, 1904, were $384,180; operating expenses, $252,584; taxes, $4,855; net earnings, $231,366; interest on $2,989,000 5 per cent bonds outstanding, $151,750; balance, surplus, $79,846. From January 1 to May 5 the gross earnings increased 12 per cent over the corresponding period last year, and from April 5 to May 5 this year receipts increased 15.6 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Pittsburgh bank exchanges yesterday were nearly $3,000,000 larger than for the same day last year.

Smelters and Union Pacific: Tate and Hayes bought 2,000 each.

The Interborough Rapid Transit system (subway-elevated) surplus after charges for the March 31 quarter were $725,097, an increase of $327,085.

For the March quarter the gross earnings of Erie increased $120,842, and net increased $261,454. For the same quarter Delaware, Lackawanna & Western reported an increase of $416,602 gross and $370,367 net.

Interests in the United Lead Company are more confident than ever that the company will be merged in the near future with the National Lead Company. So far as the United Lead Company is concerned the deal is already closed, but definite action has not yet been taken by either the directors of the National Lead Company or its stockholders. Such a merger would have to be ratified by not only the directors of each company, but by the stockholders as well. It is expected that National Lead directors will consider the matter at a meeting on May 15. In case the board approves the merger on the terms proposed, a meeting of the stockholders would likely be called to ratify the proposition. In case the merger is carried out, President Cole would unquestionably be chosen as the head of the new concern.

SLUGGISH BEGINNING ENDS IN RECOVERY

Character of Market's Trading Still Professional—Does Not Respond to Crop Report.

[By Private Wire to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, May 12.—The Herald this (Friday) morning says:

The stock market of yesterday was divided into an interval of sluggishness and depression in the early trading, succeeded by one of recovery and animated trading near the close. The net changes were unequally divided, and while a number of stocks made very substantial gains, by far

ANOTHER STEP IN MARSHALL DEAL

F. T. Morris Articles to Buy the Property for $600,000, or $7,500 a Foot.

FOUR GOOD SALES CLOSED

The deal for the Marshall holdings in Diamond street, near Smithfield street, has progressed so far that articles of agreement have been signed for the purchase of the property. If the deal goes through it will be at a price of $600,000, or $7,500 a front foot. About two weeks ago a 90-day option was secured on the property by a local real estate broker named Tate. Several deals were started soon after. In one of these the apparent buyer is F. T. Morris, a local real estate broker, who has articled for the purchase of the property through the agency of the Burns & Reilly Real Estate Company. In addition to articles of agreement in this deal, the Burns & Reilly company has negotiated at 20-year lease on the property, or rather on the building to be erected on the site. This lease is at the rate of $40,000 a year, and a bond of $10,000 was put up a few days ago as a guarantee of good faith. At this point in the transaction a hitch occurred, the Marshall heirs objecting to the bond on the ground that it was too small. It is not known who Mr. Morris represents in the transaction, but it is the general belief that his clients will build a 10-story hotel on the site. Frank McCaan has been mentioned as the real buyer of the property, but this is only a rumor. The Marshall lot, which is vacant, is 80x90 feet. In order to make a hotel proposition profitable it would be necessary to get control of enough frontage in Smithfield street to give an entrance. It is reported that negotiations are now pending for a lease on 60 feet of the Howard block, at the corner of Diamond street, extending back 60 feet to the Marshall lot. Harry Davis leased this property over a year ago for 20 years, and has sub-leased it to merchants.

Water Street Warehouse Sold.

Through the office of the Samuel W. Black Company, Boggs & Buhl have disposed of their warehouse property at 243-245 Water street for $90,000. The buyer is Theodore Cappel, who takes the property for an investment. The lot has a frontage of 30 feet with a depth of 80 feet, making the rate of sale $2,000 a front foot, which is about what Water street frontage between Wood and Market streets is considered worth. A five-story brick warehouse stands on the lot. This is occupied by the Standard Scale Company, which pays $4,000 a year rent.

Mr. Cappell figured in another real estate deal yesterday, by which he sold 25 feet of the property at 5704 Penn street for $27,500. The deal was handled by the Oakland Savings and Trust Company, and the buyer is an Oakland business man who contemplates improving the site with a good building. The lot measures 25x90 feet, making the rate of sale $1,100 a front foot. The improvements consist of a three-story brick store and dwelling, which usually rent for about $1,200 a year, although the building is vacant now. The sale is the largest in this vicinity for some time and the property is considered a good bargain at the price, as the adjoining lot with a somewhat better building sold a few months ago for $1,280 a front foot.

Sixth Ward Corner Brings $36,500.

Through the office of L. A. Clark & Co., Mary Comon and Mrs. M. McGrath have sold to Gurney James M. Clark the property at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Prince street, Sixth ward, for $36,500. The property has a frontage of 28.8 feet with a depth of 115 feet to Ann street. Two stores and houses stand on the lot. The leases on these expire next April, when Mr. Clark will remodel and improve the buildings for modern business places.

Dr. G. Conti has bought from Martin and Thomas Burke, Sr., 1011-1013 Wylie avenue for $32,000. The lot is 43x95 feet and is improved with two-story brick houses which are well rented. H. M. Berman of the Merchants Savings & Trust Company handled the transaction.

The Commonwealth Real Estate Company has sold for the McCandless estate to Murdoch, Kerr & Co., 23 feet of frontage in Strawberry alley, with a depth of 60 feet, for $17,000. The lot is only a short distance above Smithfield street and is in the rear of the plant of the purchasers. On the lot is an old carpenter shop. The purchase was made to protect the buyers from a building being erected to cut off their light.

Through the office of George Schmidt & Son, Owen Evans sold to David E. McClurg and John R. Brooks a farm of 102 acres at Stoops Ferry for $10,000 cash.

More Activity on Charleroi Line.

Two purchases in the Castle Shannon district announced in full yesterday show the increasing interest in property along the new Charleroi street car line. The more important deal, which was reported with a wrong buyer some time ago, was the purchase by John F. Sweeny of the farm of the John Hoffman estate for $17,000. The farm includes 34 acres and is on the south side of the Charleroi line, about three-fourths of a mile from Castle Shannon. It is seven minutes' walk from Longview station on the Wabash railroad, by which road it is just 25 minutes' ride to the city. The farm fronts on three roads, the Castle Shannon road, the Baptist church road and the Grove station and Brownsville avenue road. On the land is a large picnic grove of big forest trees, including beech, maple ash, oak and hickory. It is Mr. Sweeney's intention to cut the property up into two-acre plots to be sold for summer homes and truck patches at about $2,000 each.

The other purchase was made by H. F. Woodburn of the Real Estate Trust Company, who secured 47 acres known as the Jacob Keltzer property, near Summit park on the Charleroi line. The price was $12,500. The farm is at Logan's crossing and is well adapted to plotting. Mr. Woodburn will at once divide it into one and two-acre plots, which seem to be very popular with lot buyers this season. The purchase was made through the James Murtha Company and is payment there were tendered two eight-room brick houses on lots 24x110 feet each at 253-255 Denniston avenue, near Monongahela avenue, Swissvale, and a frame house on 20x100 feet in Atwood street, Oakland. The Swissvale houses rent for $48 a month, and were put into the deal at $7,000. The Oakland residence is valued at $7,000 also, and rents for $55 a month.

Another Allegheny Purchase.

The Fidelity Title and Trust Company has sold to a local investor the properties at 219-221 Sandusky street, Fourth ward, Allegheny, for $13,500. The lot is 40x100 feet and is improved with two brick houses which rent for $110 a month.

Wallace Brothers and Alexander Brothers of Braddock, who recently bought the Goodwin frontage at Church and McClure avenues, Swissvale, have decided to run a 40-foot street through the center of the property the long way. The lot includes two acres and measures 216x404 feet. By the arrangements proposed the owners will secure 12 lots facing in the two streets named and 12 lots fronting in the entrance to be opened. These will be 85 and 86 feet wide. They have already been offered $60 a foot for the frontage in McClure avenue and will hold the terrace frontage at about $60 a foot.

Mellon street: C. G. Mitchell sold for Sarah McHendry to A. L. Atkinson 48x110 feet in Mellon street, between Wellesley avenue and Jackson street, Nineteenth ward, for $6,000. The buyer will build a large house.

Beechwood boulevard: A. Z. Byers & Co. sold for J. M. Hastings to Fred W. Winter 50x200 feet at the southwest corner of Beechwood boulevard and Northumberland street. Twenty-second ward, for $2,500. The site has a 60-foot building restriction and will be improved with a $15,000 brick residence.

Franklin township: W. C. Butterfield & Co. sold for W. H. Skile to Karl Zvarnik seven acres in Franklin township, in the Perrysville district, for $1,350.

Minor Realty Transactions.

Anderson street: The Aronson-Friedman Company has closed the sale of the Ira Aronson holdings in Anderson street for $3,500, the buyer being Celia Bayne. The lot is 20?5 feet and has on it a brick and frame house.

The Aronson Realty Company takes credit for the sale of the M. J. Maloney residence in Denniston avenue, which was purchased by Robert Reinhold for $25,000, as published in The Gazette yesterday.

Meyran avenue: Elizabeth Covett sold to Willa A. Graham an improved lot, 20x100 feet, in Meyran avenue, Fourteenth ward, for $6,500.

De Soto street: Edwin C. Harris sold to C. L. Kolline an improved lot, 20x71 feet, in De Soto street, Fourteenth ward, for $8,000.

Upton street: Frank Mannilla sold to R. E. Stephan an improved lot, 20x93 feet in Upton street, Twenty-first ward, for $3,000.

Lincoln avenue: Charles Ross sold to the Rt. Rev. R. J. T. Canavin 21x127 feet in Lincoln avenue, Twenty-first ward, for $2,000.

Brushton avenue: Louis Habe sold to Eleanor B. Schafer 25x100 feet in Brushton avenue, Thirty-seventh ward, for $1,300.

Greenwood street: G. A. Brooks sold to W. J. Elkin 48x126 feet in Greenwood street, Eighteenth ward, for $1,600.

Ft. Wayne to Build Big Foundry.

Building permits were issued yesterday by the Allegheny bureau of building inspection to the Pittsburgh, Ft. Wayne & Chicago railroad for a brick roundhouse to cost $90,000, and a brass foundry to cost $20,000, to be erected in the yards in the Second ward; to Mrs. Lillian Gunsallis, for a three-story brick dwelling at No. 411 Jackson street, to cost $4,500; to Frederick Bannerot, for a two-story brick veneer dwelling in Perrysville avenue, near Dunlap street, to cost $8,500; to Joseph Schmidtlein, for a two-story frame dwelling in Locust, near Royal street, to cost $1,800; to Mrs. L. Schnebel, for a two-story frame dwelling at No. 1405 Washington avenue, to cost $2,700.

OPEN THE NEW HOME.

Pittsburgh Grain and Flour Exchange in New Quarters.

The Pittsburgh Grain and Flour exchange met in its new quarters, in the Grain Exchange building, Penn avenue and Tenth street, yesterday. The opening exercises consisted of speeches by members and railroad officials, and a smoker indulged in by themselves and their friends.

R. S. McCague, the first speaker, talked of "The Past," briefly reviewing the history of the exchange. J. W. Smith talked on "The Present," and the concluding address, "The Future," was delivered by D. G. Stewart. The members were well pleased with the new rooms, and it is believed a decided improvement will follow their occupancy.

The officers of the flour and grain exchange are: President, Philip H. Geidel; vice president, W. W. Beatty; secretary, John Floyd, and treasurer, Robert Thorn.

Butter, Eggs and Cheese.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Butter steady; receipts, 5,518 packages; street prices, extra creamery, 26@27c; official prices unchanged. Cheese firm and unchanged; receipts, 2,456 packages. Eggs steady; receipts, 21,338 cases; Pennsylvania and nearby extra, 19c; southern, 13@14c.

CHICAGO, May 11.—On the produce exchange today the butter market was steady; creameries, 20@24c; dairies, 19@22c. Eggs steady at mark, cases included, 14½c; firsts, 17@16c; prime firsts, 16½c; extra, 18c. Cheese steady at 13½@14c.

SUGAR MARKET WEAK AND FLOUR IS FIRM

Butter Looks as If It Will Suffer Another Reduction Next Monday.

Although dealers were looking for a further drop in sugar yesterday it did not come. The market is very weak, however, and is likely to go down several more points at any time. It is confidently believed the big sugar interests have held it at a high figure as long as it was possible to do so and that a decided reduction in price is now in store.

Flour continued in about the same condition yesterday it has been for a week or more. There is plenty of buying, but the market is not yet in a settled condition.

Butter was weak yesterday and another cut of ¼ half cent or more is looked for this coming week. Eggs are firmer, scarce and hard to get. This is accounted for by the fact that many hens are now begining to set and the big storage houses are taking all the eggs in the market.

Green goods had a quiet day yesterday and there were no changes in prices. Cabbage is the liveliest thing in the produce line and prices may advance greatly today or tomorrow.

HAY AND GRAIN.

Receipts.

Receipts of hay and grain yesterday were as follows: Pennsylvania lines, 6½ cars corn, 13½ cars oats, 2 cars feed, 16 cars hay, 2 cars straw, 1 car rye; Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad, 1 car corn, 3 cars hay, 3 cars oats; Baltimore & Ohio railroad, ½ car corn, 1½ cars oats, 1 car feed, 6 cars hay, 1 car straw.

Business in the grain market is still very slow, with no immediate prospect of resumption. There were only a few sales yesterday and the supply was about equal to the demand in all lines.

Railroad News.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad has as its standard design a sand house apparatus that has proven most successful. This arrangement of sand house has been applied to coaling stations at Brunswick, Md., Cumberland, Md., Keyser, W. Va., Fairmont, W. Va., Holloway, O., Glenwood, Pa., New Castle Junction, Pa., and other places. By it the wet sand storage is placed at the head end of the coaling trestle and the cars containing the wet sand are placed over the storage bin and the sand discharged from self-dumping cars. The wet sand storage bins have a capacity of 70 cubic yards, or 2,100 tons.

The drying room is in the center of the wet storage bin and so long as the wet sand is stored on a level with or above the eaves of the roof of the drying room it is conducted into the hopper of the sand stoves by gravity. When the amount of sand in storage comes below the roof of the drying room the sand is then shoveled into the stove hopper. When any part of the sand in the stove hoppers becomes burnt and thoroughly dry it flows through the meshes of the netting and falls to the floor onto the dry sand hopper, from which it is conveyed to the sand tank by gravity. After the dry sand tank is filled the application of about 50 pounds of air pressure closes the sand inlet valve and automatically forces the dry sand upward into the dry sand storage bin, from which it is conveyed by a suitable arrangement of valves and spouts into the sand boxes on the locomotives.

Hustling Work on Freight Line.

An official statement from the Pennsylvania railroad is that the new low grade freight line from Fairview, on the Susquehanna river, to Atglen, on the Philadelphia division, will be ready for regular use early in the winter and will be put into operation January 1, 1906. The line is over 40 miles long and its construction has required some skillful engineering.

Railroad Notes.

R. H. England, vice president of the Tavares & Gulf railroad, was in the city yesterday.

E. H. Utley, general manager of the Bessemer & Lake Erie, will return from Washington Saturday.

Bruce W. Duer, superintendent of the Pittsburgh division of the Baltimore & Ohio, returned home yesterday from Baltimore, where he attended a meeting of the operating officials.

The Wool Market.

LONDON, May 11.—The offerings at the wool auction sales amounted to 15,364 bales today. Competition was spirited throughout, with prices unchanged. Americans bought greasy second cross bred hoggets at 1s 4d and a fair quantity of Victorian greasy first combings at 1s 4½d. New Zealand greasy cross breds and extra, light, greasy half bred combings were also taken by Americans. The offerings of scoureds were small. They were sold chiefly to Belgium and France. Cape of Good Hope and Natal grades were in good demand. Following are the sales in detail: New South Wales, 1,800 bales; scoured, 11d@1s 10½d; greasy, 5¾d@1s 2½d. Queensland, 500 bales; scoured, 1s 6d@1s 10½d; greasy, 6¼d@1s ½d. Victoria, 1,600 bales; scoured, 1s 2d@1s 10½d; greasy, 9d@1s 4½d. South Australia, 300 bales; scoured, 1s 5d; greasy, 9½d@1s 1d. New Zealand, 5,800 bales; scoured, 9d@1s 10½d; greasy, 7¾d@1s 4d. Cape of Good Hope and Natal, 1,900 bales; scoured, 1s 1d@1s 9½d; greasy, 6½d@10½d.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The boom in wool is causing the majority of manufacturers of woolens to advance prices. Today a number of advances ranging from 2½c to 10c a yard were announced. Cotton goods are quiet. An unusually large proportion of the country's looms is running on export goods for which there has been an exceptionally heavy demand. Light weight brown cottons are particularly scarce. Jobbing trade is quiet.

WHEAT STRONGER ON REPORTS OF DAMAGE

Official Announcement Made That Nearly 1,500,000 Acres of Fall-Sown Grain Killed.

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

CHICAGO, May 11.—Official announcement that nearly 1,500,000 acres of fall sown wheat had been winter killed imparted marked strength to the wheat market here today. Extensive rains furnished another reason for manifestation of bullish sentiment. At the close July pork was up 7½@10c. Cash wheat was up 1 cent@$1.06. Corn showed a gain of 5@6c. Oats up 3@4c. Provisions are unchanged to 5c higher. Sentiment in the wheat pit was bullish from the start. At the opening July was unchanged to ¼@⅝c higher at 81¾c to 83⅛@83½c. From the first tap of the bell until the gong sounded for the close of business shorts and commission houses were active bidders. The government crop report was one of the main factors in the situation. An improvement of about 1 per cent in the condition of winter wheat since April 1 as shown by official statistics, did not apparently impress pit traders so much as did a statement in the government report that 1,432,000 acres of the land planted with wheat last fall had been abandoned or reploughed as a result of the seeds being winter killed. That the excellent condition of the growing plant indicated a crop of 663,000,000 bushels, which is about 152,000,000 bushels more than was harvested last year, did not seemingly affect traders. When sentiment favored on the small remainder of the old crop and on the possibilities of accident to the new before harvest, a majority of operators were strongly of the opinion that at the great discount now current the July option was a much better purchase than sale. Continued wet weather throughout the entire wheat belt served to strengthen in the minds of many operators this bullish conviction. Furthermore, receipts were small, a striking feature being a total absence of arrivals at Chicago. A prominent long was a heavy seller, but it was intimated that under cover he was also a fair buyer. The market gained in strength as the trading progressed. Strength of cash wheat had considerable influence on sentiment. Prices for July touched the highest point of the day was reached at 84¼c. The market closed strong, with July at 84¾@84¼c. Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 38,900 bushels. Primary receipts were 128,500 bushels, compared with 184,900 bushels a year ago.

Delays in planting operations, owing to the prevailing wet weather, brought out a good demand for corn, resulting in a strong market. The advance in wheat prices also helped to stimulate buying the yellow cereal. The volume of trading, however, was not large. July opened ⅛@¼c higher at 47c, sold between 47¼c and 47½c and closed at 47¼c. Local receipts were 49 cars, with four of contract grade.

Oats showed considerable strength. There was good buying of May by cash houses, who took all offerings on reports of an improved export business. This caused active covering of July by shorts. The market closed practically the highest point of the day. July opened a shade higher at 29¼@29½c, sold up to 29¾c and closed at 29¼c. Local receipts were 6 cars.

Higher prices for grain and smaller receipts of hogs created a firm tone to provisions. Trading was of good character, much of the demand coming from packers. Selling was scattered. At the close July pork was up 7½@10c. At $12 82½ Lard was up 2½c at $7 37½. Ribs were unchanged at $7 30.

Estimated receipts for tomorrow: Wheat, 1 car; corn, 45 cars; oats, 70 cars; hogs, 16,000 head.

PROBING DEEPLY INTO EQUITABLE

Financial Secretary Is on Stand With His Books the Entire Day.

SECRET CONFERENCE IS HELD

[By Associated Press to The Gazette.]

NEW YORK, May 11.—H. R. Winthrop, financial secretary of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was under examination again today in the inquiry of Supt. Hendricks of the state insurance department into the affairs of the society. Mr. Winthrop produced many books and documents, and was on the stand the entire day.

During the examination, a conference between Mr. Hyde in his office with Senator Depew, Vice President McIntyre and other officials of the Equitable and Mr. Hyde's counsel, Messrs. Untermeyer, Roo and Gulliver, was held. It lasted until late in the afternoon, but no inkling of its purpose was obtainable.

Two more arrests were made today in connection with that of Samuel Lobley, who was arrested in Pennsylvania a few days ago, charged with fraudulently obtaining a loan of $27,000 on a policy alleged to have been stolen from the society's vaults. The prisoners, Emil H. Neumer and Thomas Lobley, jr., are charged with being accomplices of Lobley. Neumer was a clerk in the Equitable office, and young Lobley is a nephew of Samuel. They were held today in $10,000 bail each for examination. It was reported tonight that Neumer, after a two-hours' interview with a deputy assistant district attorney, would turn state's evidence.

President Alexander and Vice Presidents Hyde and Tarbell did not appear today in the supreme court to be examined in the policy-holders' suit of Herbert G. Tull of Philadelphia, a technical error in the papers making a new order for their appearance necessary. This Justice Bishoff signed, citing these officers into court next Monday.

It was reported tonight on apparently reliable authority that the complaint in the action to oust Mr. Alexander from the trusteeship of the Hyde stock would be served within the week, and that sworn affidavits would be included, stating that no Equitable money went either directly or indirectly toward paying for the now-famous Hyde ball; that there was no unseemly action on the part of any person at that ball, and that false reports about these things were spread as part of an alleged conspiracy to injure Mr. Hyde in the eyes of the public and of the directors of the society.

When named executor the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Pittsburgh, Fourth avenue and Wood street, makes no charge for drawing up the will and for the safe keeping of it. Moreover, the attorney of the testator is retained as counsel when requested.

GOVERNOR VETOES THE STOBER BILL

Says the Department It Would Create Would Conflict With Board of Public Charities.

CLEANS UP ALL LEGISLATION

The Pittsburgh Gazette Bureau.
HARRISBURG, PA., May 11.

Gov. Pennypacker today vetoed the Stober bill, creating a department of state charitable institutions, with a chief at a salary of $6,000 a year; deputy, $2,500; three clerks, $1,400 each; messenger, $900, and unlimited examiners at $8 a day and expenses. This disposes of all the legislation left with the governor at the close of the legislature, with the exception of the appropriation bills for the state's public institutions and charities, and the general appropriation bill.

"The purpose of this bill," says the governor in his veto message, "is to create a department of state charitable institutions and the system elaborated in it would probably, if it became a law, be of benefit to the commonwealth and enable the governor and the general assembly to secure much important information concerning the condition of the institutions which the state either supports or to which it makes appropriations.

"Unfortunately, there is no provision in the bill either for entrusting the work to the board of public charities or for the repeal of the act creating that board, and of the subsequent acts imposing duties upon it. Should the present bill become a law the commonwealth would have a department of state charitable institutions and a board of public charities, both engaged in substantially the same work and both exercising supervision and a certain control over the charitable institutions.

"This state of affairs would necessarily lead to expense, trouble and confusion. Each is required to make report to the legislature and in all probability at times, their respective recommendations would be in conflict. The institutions are required to permit at all times an examination of their books and records, and a duplicate of this visatorial authority would impose unnecessary burdens upon them.

"The expenses attendant upon both would have to be provided and at the present session of the assembly bills have been passed making appropriations to each of them. In addition, under the terms of the joint resolution, approved April 18, 1905, a commission was appointed to make a full and complete investigation into the condition of the various charitable institutions, and an appropriation has been made for the purpose.

"There would then be three different bodies authorized to make like inquiries. The report of the commission, when made, may furnish important information and enable the general assembly at a subsequent session to create a department of charities, having all the light that can be thrown upon the subject."
